

Carswell Rejects Old Segregation Statements as 'Abhorrent'

IRWINTON, Ga. (AP) — Supreme Court nominee G. Harold Carswell, who gave a political speech 22 years ago pledging unyielding devotion to segregation and white supremacy, says he now rejects the words and thoughts as "obnoxious and abhorrent."

"I yield to no man, as a fellow candidate or as a fellow citizen, in the firm, vigorous belief in principles of white supremacy and I shall always be so governed," Carswell said while campaigning unsuccessfully in 1948 for the Georgia legislature.

Carswell, 50, repudiated the statement Wednesday night.

"Specifically and categorically I denounce and reject the words themselves and the thoughts they represent," said Carswell, who now is a judge of the U.S. 5th Court of Appeals. "They're obnoxious and abhorrent to my personal philosophy."

He made his remarks in an interview with WJXT in Jacksonville, Fla., and carried over CBS. Carswell lives in Tallahassee, Fla.

"There is nothing in my private life, nor is there anything in my public record of some 17 years, which could possibly indicate that I harbor racist sentiments or the insulting suggestion of racial superiority," he said Wednesday.

President Nixon nominated Carswell Monday to fill the Supreme Court vacancy created when Abe Fortas resigned under criticism last summer. Nixon had nominated U.S. 4th Court of Appeals Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. for the opening, but the Senate rejected him after debate over his financial dealings.

The White House, which had said in announcing the nomination that Carswell had received a "complete clearance," had no immediate comment Wednesday.

But Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell immediately came to Carswell's defense.

"The remarks attributed to Judge Carswell were made in the heat of a political controversy more than 20 years ago," Mitchell said. "All of the available evidence indicates that Judge Carswell is firmly committed to the constitutional and moral philosophy of racial equality.

"His judicial record on civil rights issues is highly commendable. I think it is unfortunate that a judge of Judge Carswell's high qualifications could be subjected to criticism based on remarks made 22 years ago."

An official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said Wednesday night his organization's previously announced opposition to Carswell is based on his record as a judge in civil rights cases.

"I have no way of judging whether Judge Carswell's disclaimer of the 1948 statement is true or not," said Dr. John A. Morsell, assistant director of the NAACP, who was contacted in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Carswell was 28 and a recent graduate of Mercer University law school when he gave his speech before an American Legion chapter at Gordon, Ga.

"Segregation of the races is proper and the only practical and correct way of life in our states," Carswell said. "I have always so believed and shall always so act."

Carswell, noting that he had lost the election, said Wednesday night he was defeated "because I was considered too liberal."

The text of his speech was published in Carswell's own weekly newspaper, the Irwinton Bulletin, Aug. 13, 1948.

The 1948 file of the newspaper, the legal record of the county at the time, was taken from court files in Irwinton Wednesday by an attorney shortly after discovery of Carswell's speech.

Wilkinson County Court Clerk Willis I. Allen said the entire 1948 and 1949 volumes were removed under court order Wednesday shortly after a reporter saw him.

Alexander Boone, an attorney and a son of the man who defeated Carswell in 1948, obtained the court order from Superior Court Judge George Carpenter.

In an interview, Boone declined to say if he was acting for Carswell or had spoken to him about the matter. "It would be a personal affair if I had been," Boone said.

Boone also refused a reporter access to other newspapers in the files which he took.

Files of the other weekly newspaper here, the Wilkinson County News, edited by Boone's brother Joseph, also were unavailable Wednesday. "So far, we haven't been able to locate them," Joseph Boone said.

Carswell dealt with other local issues in his speech, and in these paragraphs, stated his racial views of the day:

"I am a Southerner by ancestry, birth, training, inclination,

Nixon Advocates Boosting Crime, Pollution Struggles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon told Congress and the nation today he will boost spending to fight crime and pollution at home and, in foreign affairs, can foresee "a generation of uninterrupted peace."

In his first State of the Union address, before a joint Senate-House session, Nixon said law enforcement agencies will be the only ones to receive increased funds in his forthcoming federal budget.

And he said he will propose the biggest, costliest antipollution program ever—with $10 billion to be spent on "clean water" projects alone. The outlays would be made over a five-year period.

Touching briefly on foreign affairs, Nixon foresaw progress in achieving peace in Vietnam and looked hopefully toward fruitful negotiations with the Soviet Union and, possibly, Communist China.

"I would be the last to suggest that the road to peace is not difficult and dangerous," he said, "but I believe our new policies have contributed to the prospect that America may have the best chance since World War II to enjoy a generation of uninterrupted peace."

Announcing that he will submit at least a dozen major legislative programs during the 1970 congressional session, Nixon also called for early action on more than 40 bills he submitted last year that await action.

Nixon, emphasizing domestic concerns in his 4,500-word address, placed particular stress on efforts to curb inflation, crime and pollution.

The chief executive, promising to submit his second straight balanced budget in the next two weeks, pointed to budget restraint as a key toward taming inflation, which he blamed largely on federal spending during the Democratic administrations that preceded him during the 60s.

"I recognize the political popularity of spending programs, particularly in an election year," he said. "But unless we stop the rise in prices, the cost of living for millions of American families will become unbearable and government's ability to plan programs for progress for the future will become impossible."

Referring to budget cuts, Nixon said:

"There is one area where I have ordered an increase rather than a cut—the requests of those agencies with the responsibility of law enforcement."

He said federal spending to assist local law enforcement will double in the 1971 fiscal year that begins July 1.

Asserting that "we must declare and win the war against the criminal elements which increasingly threaten our cities, our homes and our lives," Nixon tossed in a passage aimed directly at his legislative audience:

"I doubt if there are many members of this Congress who live more than a few blocks from here who would dare leave their cars in the Capitol Garage and walk home alone tonight."

Pointing to 13 anticrime bills submitted by the administration last year, the President complained that none has yet become law.

"We in the executive have done everything we can under existing law," he said, "but new and stronger weapons are needed in this fight."

Turning to pollution, he said

Patterson Aligns Senate

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, completed realignment of Senate committees today, getting away from the power structure erected a year ago by Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro.

Blackwell was replaced as president pro tem by Patterson Tuesday on a 27-5 vote.

Under the rules imposed by Blackwell, he served on all committees but the new rules changed that. Patterson appointed Blackwell chairman of the committee on Industrial Development, a relatively minor committee, and as vice chairman of the Committee on Roads and Highways.

He also put Blackwell on the Agriculture, Conservation Parks, Forestry and Natural Resources Committee; the Education Committee; the Committee on Elections, Military, Veteran and Naval Affairs, and the Judiciary Committee.

Here are the chairmen of other committees under the Patterson alignment as announced today:

Agriculture — Sen. Omer H. Avery, D-Troy; Apportionment — Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann, a Blackwell lieutenant who retained his chairmanship; Banks and Banking and Financial Institutions — Sen. Jack Gant, D-Independence, same as before; Bills Perfected and Passed — Sen. Robert A. Pentland, D-St. Louis, a consolidation of two former committees.

Correctional Institutions — Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, a Blackwell supporter; Criminal Jurisprudence — Sen. Lawrence J. Lee, D-St. Louis, another Blackwell supporter who retained his committee chairmanship;

Elections, Military, Veteran and Naval Affairs — Sen. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, a Blackwell supporter, same as before; Employment Security and Workmen's Compensation — a consolidation of two former committees, Sen. John Johnson D-Affton, a Blackwell man;

Fiscal Affairs — Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia; Insurance — Sen. Edgar J. Keating, D-Kansas City, same as before; Interstate Cooperation — Patterson, as decreed by statute; Judiciary — Sen. Maurice Schechter, D-Creve Coeur;

Labor and Management Relations — Sen. Edward T. Linehan, D-St. Louis, a Blackwell supporter; Legislative Research — Johnson; Public Health, Welfare and Mental Health—a consolidation of two former committees, Sen. William J. Cason,

Yablonski Murder Case Is Beginning to Unravel

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The first of three men arrested in connection with the death of Joseph Yablonski, United Mine Workers insurgent, and his wife and daughter, was accused today of conspiring to kill Yablonski to keep him from testifying before a federal grand jury investigating labor activities.

Claude Edward Vealey, 26,

Cleveland, was charged with conspiring to kill Yablonski, illegally transporting a gun across state lines, and interfering with administration of justice. Arraignment was set for Jan. 30 in Cleveland.

Others to appear before a U.S. Commissioner today were Paul E. Gilly, 37, East Cleveland, and Aubran W. "Buddy" Martin, 23, Cleveland.

All three men were arrested in Cleveland Wednesday by FBI agents.

Bond for Vealey was set at $250,000 on the conspiracy to kill charge, $25,000 on the weapons. No bond was set on the interference charge, a misdemeanor.

Federal officials declined to elaborate on the accusation that Yablonski was killed to prevent him from testifying. The allegation was contained in the formal charge read to Vealey at his appearance for the setting of bond.

Vealey, an Ohio State Reformatory parolee, also was charged with violating the federal firearms act by transporting firearms across state lines.

Family members have asserted that the slayings of Yablonski, 59, his wife Margaret, 57, and daughter Charlotte Joanne, 25, stemmed from Yablonski's unsuccessful bid to become president of the UMW.

Yablonski had made an unsuccessful attempt to unseat UMW President W. A. "Tony"

Ray Simons Running As Independent

Councilman Ray Simons is back in the race for mayor again — this time as an independent. The Third Ward Democrat filed for candidacy on the independent ticket Thursday morning in the office of city clerk Ralph Dedrick.

Simons threw his hat in the ring as the first announced candidate for mayor three weeks ago. Then, last Thursday, he withdrew, explaining that he could not afford the time away from his job that the mayor's duties would require. Simons is an employee of Victory Life Insurance.

At that time Simons declared, "I will do everything in my power to help elect the man that is chosen by the Democratic party for mayor."

The councilman's re-entry into the race as an independent sparked talk that Simons' withdrawal as a Democrat may have been prompted by party infighting.

Enemy Soldiers Attack Allies in Mekong Delta

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops stormed out of the U Minh Forest early today and made their biggest attack in the Mekong Delta in two months.

The enemy force killed 15 South Vietnamese marines and wounded 41 others. But the government claimed 72 of the attackers were killed in the two-hour battle on the northeast edge of the forest 122 miles southwest of Saigon.

An estimated 400 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong attacked about 600 South Vietnamese mariners in a brigade command post after softening it up with a 100-round mortar barrage.

As the enemy fired bazooka rockets and machine guns, U.S. Navy planes scrambled from nearby Binh Thuy Air Base and raked the enemy with five-inch rockets. Artillery blasted the attackers from the ground.

The enemy force pulled out after two hours, leaving 72 bodies and more than a score of weapons on the battlefield, field reports said.

In Saigon, meanwhile, the U.S. and South Vietnamese commands issued weekly casualty reports showing that the total of battlefield deaths dropped off on all sides last week. The toll for South Vietnamese troops was the lowest in eight months.

The allied commands reported 84 Americans, 197 government troops and 1,797 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed in action. The U.S. Command said 706 Americans were wounded in action.

The American death toll was

Charge Allied Massacre

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong charged today that American, South Vietnamese and South Korean troops killed more than 700 civilians in a group of villages in central Vietnam last November, more than 20 months after the alleged American massacre at My Lai.

Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, foreign minister of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government, told the 51st session of the Vietnam peace talks that a massacre in Quang Nam province took place under direct American command as part of the "accelerated pacification" operation named Sea Tiger.

"This is one of the biggest and most barbarous mass slaughters perpetrated by the American, puppet and satellite troops in the first year of the Nixon Administration in the framework of 'Vietnamizing' the war," she said.

She added that it showed the "emptiness" of President Nixon's statement that the killing at My Lai was an "isolated incident."

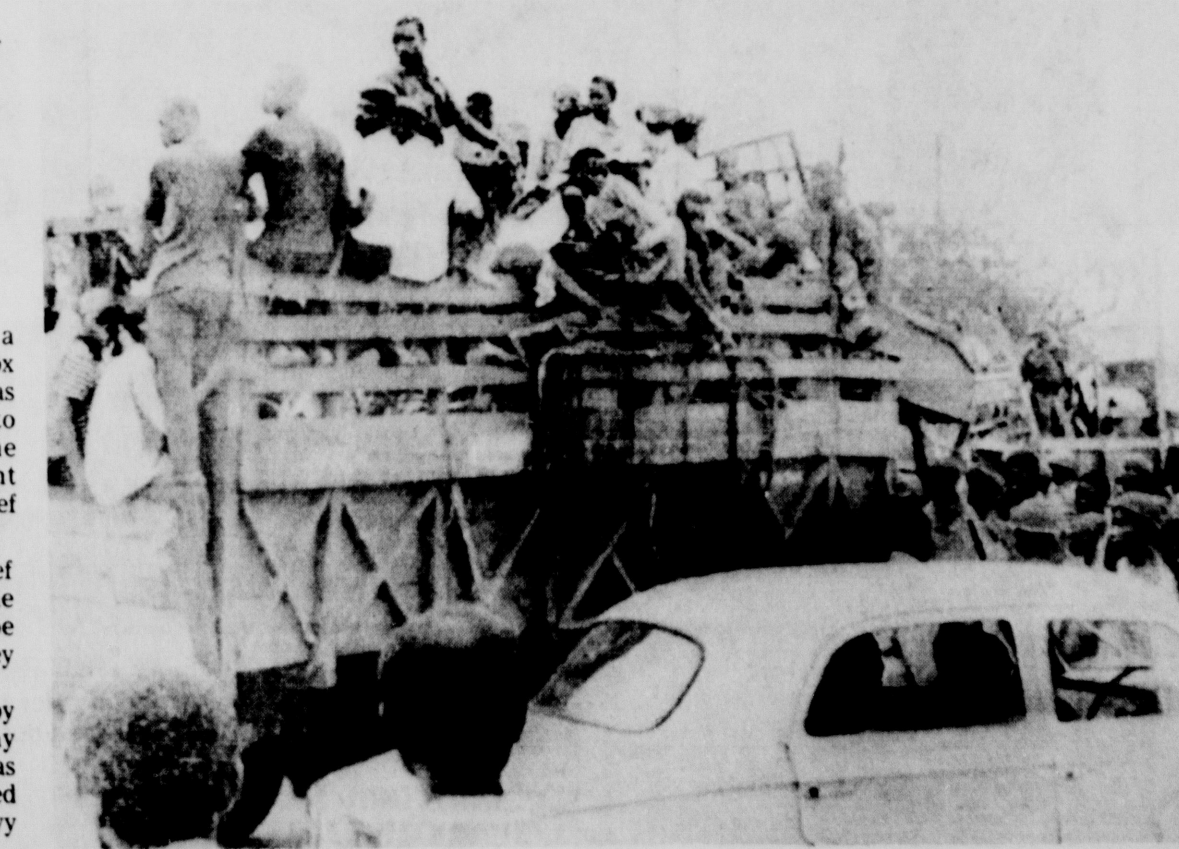

She said the killing occurred Nov. 11-12 in the villages of Binh Duong, Binh Giang, Binh Trieu, Binh Hoa and Binh Dao, in Thang Binh district.

She said the dead included women, children and old men, and that more than 1,000 houses were burned, thousands of acres of crops were destroyed and thousands of domestic animals were slaughtered.

The surviving inhabitants were taken to "concentration zones" for detention, she charged.

The incident proves that the United States "is systematically conducting a war of extermination in South Vietnam," Mrs. Binh charged, adding that it would strengthen the Viet Cong's resolve to continue its struggle "until complete victory."

More Iraqi Executions

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Iraq's execution mill worked without letup today with 36 persons put to death in 24 hours — all but seven of them accused of plotting to overthrow the government.

Seven of the men, not connected with the plot, were convicted in November of spying for the United States, Radio Baghdad said. It identified one of them, Albert Nounou, as a Jew.

The 29 persons who were accused of trying to overthrow the leftist regime of President Ahmed Hassan el Bakr Tuesday night and early Wednesday faced firing squads or hangmen.

Bakr addressed crowds outside the presidential palace, saying that any plot against his government would "only lead to the cutting of the plotters' throats," Radio Baghdad said.

Bakr said instigators of the abortive coup "are being justly rewarded."

He added that his regime had proved "stronger than intrigues," and vowed to "mercilessly crush anyone who would stand in the way of the revolution."

"Conspirators must know that they will pay with their lives for any adventure against the revolution," Bakr told cheering crowds who had taken part in a funeral procession for two soldiers reported killed defending the regime.

Executioners worked past midnight Wednesday, carrying out death sentences given 22 persons convicted of the coup attempt.

Then at dawn, the seven persons convicted in November were put to death.

A few hours later, Radio Baghdad said six army officers and a civilian were doomed by a special court for taking part in the attempted coup. Shortly thereafter, the military men were shot by firing squad and the civilian was hanged.

The government newspaper, Al Thawra, said firing squads were using the plotters' own weapons for the executions.

The Baghdad broadcast said that in addition to the six military men and civilian executed this morning, the court had sentenced three other persons to life imprisonment. An army colonel was given a 10-year sentence and six other officers were acquitted.

Accusing Iran and the United States of being behind the coup attempt Tuesday, the Iraqi government also ordered Iranian Ambassador Eallah el Amili and four of his chief aides to leave the country within 24 hours.

The Iranian government denied the charge and ordered Iraqi Ambassador Mohammed al Yasin and four military attaches to leave Iran.

Iraq also closed the Iranian consulates in Baghdad, Basra and Kerbela, and the Tehran government issued closing orders for the Iraqi consulates in Iran.

Iraq broke diplomatic relations with the United States during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and has never reopened them.

Thief Attempts To 'Bag' Money At Local Bank

A thief, who apparently has a key to the night depository box at Third National Bank, was unsuccessful in an attempt to extract money from the receptacle Tuesday night according to Police Chief William Miller.

According to Miller the thief attached a plastic bag to the interior of the box in the hope of catching deposits as they were dropped into the box.

When the box was opened by bank personnel Wednesday morning, the plastic bag was found with a hole in it, caused by the weight of a very heavy deposit.

Chief Miller suggests that any person who makes use of the night depository boxes, and notices anything suspicious where depositing money, should immediately notify the police department.

Courtship is Husband's Time to Polish Acting

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — As every wife finds out in time, a man is an actor during courtship. It takes marriage to show him in his true colors.

Before the wedding there was nothing he wouldn't do for her. Now if she asks him to go to the store for an item she forgot he delivers an impassioned half-hour monologue on why do I have to do everything around here?

Lightly he picked her up in his arms and carried her across the threshold of their new home the day they returned from their honeymoon. But if she playfully starts to cuddle up in his lap now he complains his knee is sprung.

There was a time when he liked to read her romantic poetry by the hour. Now all he ever reads to her are grim items from the newspaper about the rising cost of living or people who are getting divorces for odd reasons.

A love light used to come into his eyes in the old days when she mischievously ran her fingers through his hair, and he would laugh and clasp her to him tightly. Now, she reflects bitterly, if she ran her fingers through his hair the only result would be to muss up his dandruff.

In the mad glad months when he was courting her, they used to go everywhere together. But now it's a big night out for her if he agrees to escort her to a PTA meeting.

Before they plighted their troth at the altar, he called her by pet names, such as "sweet thing," "Princess," and "my little queen bee." Now, unconsciously imitating the children, he absent-mindedly calls her "Mother."

When they first planned their future, heart to heart, he said it would be wonderful if they had a family of five children. When she reminds him of that now, he rejoins, "Yeah, but I said five kids—not five monsters."

He spent his salary on her like a prodigal king in that vanished time when he showered her with roses and candy and wanted to buy her champagne every Saturday night. But what happens now if she asks him for a small check to buy a bargain-basement dress? "Didn't your parents teach you that money doesn't grow on trees?" he moans.

Then he loved to listen to her and said her voice reminded him of soft music. Now if she even opens her mouth, he puts his fingers in his ears and says, "Oh, oh—who turned on Niagara Falls?"

Sometimes when alone she wonders whatever happened to the warm-hearted lover of her youth who always came to her door with flowers in his hand. Now all he has in his hand is a pound of bacon.

Escapees Receive Charges

OLATHE, Kan. (AP) — Thomas Preston Lamb and Patrick Neil McKey were arraigned on a total of 13 charges of second-degree kidnaping, jailbreak, armed robbery and auto theft Wednesday after their escape from the Johnson County jail earlier in the day.

Lamb, 28, of Fort Scott, Kan., and McKey, 18, of Kansas City, Kan., were captured at a roadblock near La Cygne, Kan., 40 miles south of Olathe, about four hours after their escape.

Bond was set at $150,000 each. A preliminary hearing was set for McKey on Jan. 30. Lamb's preliminary hearing was scheduled Feb. 9.

Lamb had been held on charges of kidnaping Miss Patricia Ann Childs, 18, of Overland Park, Kan., Jan. 15, and the kidnap and murder of Miss Karen Sue Kemmerly, 24, of Kansas City, who disappeared Dec. 2.

McKey had until Feb. 3 to serve on a 30-day sentence for failure to appear in court on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

The pair released their hostage, Lloyd Midyett, 53, of Olathe, at the roadblock before surrendering. Midyett, an employee of the Kansas School for the Deaf, was unharmed.

Officials said McKey started the break when he snatched a revolver from the dispatcher's desk as he cleaned up the sheriff's office while working as a trusty.

He ordered the dispatcher and jailer to open the cell in which Lamb was held and to unlock the chains holding Lamb to the bunk. They escaped from the courthouse by kicking out a window in a door and crawling through.

The pair went across the street to a cafe where Midyett was awaiting breakfast. They asked if he had a car and when he answered "yes" they ordered him to accompany them.

New Jumbo Jet Starts Slowly

NEW YORK (AP) — A Boeing 747 substituting for another that had been grounded by an overheated engine, took off on the jumbo jet's maiden transatlantic commercial flight at 1:52 a.m. today—27 minutes after the flight originally was due in London.

The first passengers in a new era of mass transportation filed aboard the original plane at 6:15 p.m., only to be unloaded two hours later. There were 10 "no shows" among a capacity booking of 362, and 20 other passengers who originally showed up left during the delays and did not make the flight.

Before the flight, the replacement plane, named "Victor," was rechristened "Young America," the name the original plane had been given by Mrs. Richard Nixon at her christening.

The revised flight schedule called for the plane to arrive in London at 12:45 p.m., London time.

Leads Fight For 'Quality of Life'

By DOUG KNEIBERT
Managing Editor

Suddenly "ecology" is becoming the big word in Sedalia.

In a flurry of recent activity — reflecting the growing nationwide awareness of the problem — the environment is being studied by a variety of women's groups, civic clubs and many other organizations and individuals.

Agent For Area

All this is very gratifying to Bill Young; it means he is doing his job well.

Young holds the title of "Extension environmental health agent." Innocent enough, you say. Yet Young and his like throughout the nation are laying the groundwork for what promises to be the Revolution of the 70's, and hopefully well beyond.

Young's bag is human ecology — the study of how man's changing environment is changing man himself. Mostly in bad ways.

Under a pilot program funded by the University of Missouri Extension Service and the federal Department of Agriculture, Young — the first agent of his type in the nation — covers a 15-county area, with headquarters in Sedalia at the Pettis County Extension Center.

Why here? "As the first such agent of my type, I had my choice of going anywhere in Missouri," Young said. "I chose Sedalia and Western Missouri because this area is expected to see the greatest growth in the state. The problems here, which are a mix of urban, rural, strip mining, and the like — are the problems of the nation as a whole."

Covers Wide Area

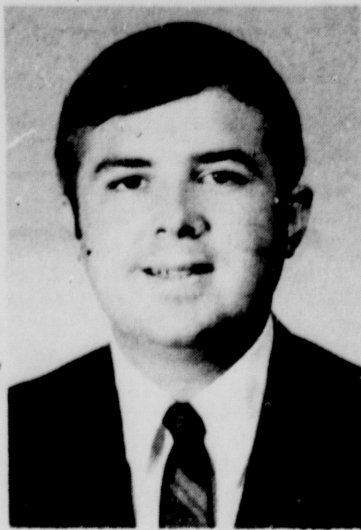

Young's area of responsibility is almost overwhelming: Pettis, Johnson, Henry, Lafayette, Ray, Clay, Platte, Jackson, Cass, Hickory, Vernon, Bates, Cedar, St. Clair and Benton Counties.

How can one man do it? "In-depth education is impossible at this stage," Young said. "I'm out here to motivate the people and get them to solve their own problems."

Motivation. Education. The two key words in Young's job description. To get this job done, he endlessly makes the luncheon club circuit, imploring his listeners to take up the fight themselves to save their environmental "quality of life."

"I'm getting about 15 requests a week now to talk. This is interest that wasn't obvious four months ago," Young says.

Young also works closely

Bill Young

with other Extension agents, so that environmental emphasis can extend into other areas, such as feedlot pollution, insecticide use, industrial waste problems, etc.

Common to All

One of Young's objectives is to show people that pollution isn't just something that happens in the big cities.

"The problems are most intense in the cities," Young said, "but are not limited to them. Take air pollution for instance. In Sedalia we have westerly winds. When Kansas City's air pollution is caught in a thermal inversion, we get their polluted air here."

Young gives an example of driving from Sedalia all the way to the Marshall Junction before escaping the blanket of polluted air from Kansas City. Once on Interstate 70 he had clear air until just outside Columbia, where he was met with an inversion carrying polluted air from St. Louis.

"So we here in Sedalia are often breathing air that is very similar to what they have in Kansas City or St. Louis," Young said.

Other problems are homegrown, such as pollution of streams from industrial or farm sources, erosion and misuse of land, over-cutting of timber and the threat of wholesale use of pesticides.

Need to Know

Yet all of these problems must be thought of together, Young emphasizes. "I think the main problem is the rifle approach — people get interested in air pollution or pesticides but miss the overall approach. If I have one job, this is it — to get people to understand the basic ecological problems involved."

Probably no one group has rallied to the cause of preserving the environment as have young people, Young says. "The kids are really turning on over this thing," he said. He pointed out that on April 22 a nationwide "teach-in" on the environment is scheduled, with every campus in the nation being urged to participate.

Young said the area response since September, when he set up shop, has been "overwhelming." "Originally we planned a 5-year lag time to develop a program. Young said, 'We will be lucky now to have one year.'

Up to People

The problem is being more urgently stated every day. The answer, however, is not quite so clear at this point, he adds.

"Basically what we are saying is that we have an environmental crisis on our hands, primarily caused by technology and the demands of a growing population.

"We have the same technology available to solve the problems. The question is — what level of environment do we want?"

Ann Landers

Question 'Potency' Of Drinking Water

Dear Ann Landers: Thirty-six people work in this office. In the past six months, there have been nine pregnancies. One of the girls has started bringing a thermos of drinking water from home. It seems she read about a young woman in Australia who swears she got pregnant from the water in a swimming pool. She sees a definite connection.

We realize this sounds crazy, but in this day and age when scientists are talking about test-tube babies and producing organic matter in laboratories, anything is possible. Before you make a decision, please concede that there is a lot to be said for keeping an open mind. — Query In Triplicate

Dear Trip: I agree it's a good idea to keep an open mind. Something might drop in. That girl in Australia may well have gotten pregnant in the swimming pool, but it wasn't from the water, honey.

As for the babe in your office who is carrying a thermos jug from home, are you sure it's water she's got in there?

Dear Ann Landers: I am 15 and have been dating for three months. I have no trouble with boys — that is, most boys. The one I am writing about has a weird effect on me. Chris gives me stomach trouble. When I am with him, I can't eat a bite. I feel so tight inside it is awful. It is embarrassing to see all the other kids devouring pizza, hamburgers and French fries, while I struggle to finish a cup of hot chocolate. I like Chris more than anyone else. Why does he give me stomach trouble? — Nutty Nell

Dear Nell: Most stomach trouble originates about three feet up — in the head. The stomach is a principal target for relayed messages. Sometimes the message reads, "I am unsure of myself" or "I am frightened," or "I feel guilty," or "I'm not measuring up as I should." Try to decode your message and go to work on whatever is bothering you. And get some help if you can't hack it alone.

Dear Ann Landers: What can be done about a couple in our crowd who act as if no one in the world has kids but them? Both this man and his wife monopolize every conversation with the cute sayings of their children. Their kids are darling but then, so are ours — and everybody else's.

We have seen the same batch of pictures four times and heard the same stories over and over until I could tear the hair out of my head. They forget who has seen and heard what and every time they tell a story they add something and make it better.

Last Sunday they ran two hours of old home movies. We were trapped with three other couples.

Is there any defense against people like this? What do you advise? — Fed Up

Dear Fed Up: Distance.

Confidential to Mystified, Your friend's "secret" is that she knows how to make men feel comfortable. And she's probably got a small corn on her ear from listening. Observe this gal in a group. I'll bet she knows how to draw people out, gets them to talk about themselves — and keeps herself in the background.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits — the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways Too Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Bank President Retires

Change of Command

William R. Courtney, 68, a native of Sedalia, recently stepped down as president of the Mexico (Mo.) Savings Bank, a position he had held since 1942.

Courtney attended Sedalia grade schools, and two years of Smith-Cotton High School. He was graduated from Lawrenceville, a preparatory school for boys in New Jersey, and was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Princeton University.

He was with Sedalia Bank and Trust Co. from 1925 until taking over as chief executive of the Mexico Bank. An outstanding civic leader, he was elected president of the Missouri Bankers Association in 1952-53 and served as a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

He and Mrs. Courtney, the former Miss Virginia Longan of Sedalia, plan to travel extensively, but to keep their present home in Mexico.

Succeeding him as president of the bank is John R. Cline, previously vice-president. Courtney will continue on the bank's board of directors.

Senator Opens His Criticism Of Franchises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Franchise agreements too often "indenture" small businessmen to the parent company, making their dream of self-ownership a sham, Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., charged today.

"No man who dances to a tune played by a giant—or serves at the pleasure of the big daddy company is truly independent," Hart said in prepared testimony on the $90 billion a year franchise industry.

Also scheduled to testify were former professional football player Brad Keys and New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath. Both men have licensed their names to restaurant chains.

Hart, in urging support for his bill to protect franchise holders, said legislation is needed to guarantee justice in contracts binding these small businessmen to the franchisor.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., originally intended to probe what it said was the lack of the number of minority group-owned franchises. But committee investigators said the probe was broadened to include all aspects of the industry when evidences of fraud and questionable business practices were found.

Farm Roundup

Common Agreement Point Is Need of Rural Cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nixon administration farm officials are in tune with former Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman on at least one philosophical point concerning rural America: a need for new cities in the countryside.

Freeman, who headed the Agriculture Department during the Democratic administration of the 1960s, advocated for years that more attention be given "rural-urban balance" as a way of improving the quality of living for more people.

The idea, which originated among social scientists long before Freeman, has been a favorite topic of Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin and other administration leaders.

Freeman says in an industry newsletter published by the Corn Refiners Association, Inc., that the United States has "become transfixed . . . by a mirror that harshly reflects the problem of a prosperous, yet restive people" concerned about living quality.

"One basic image that emerges might be compared to that of an aging starlet, whose wrinkles and curves have begun showing up in the wrong places," Freeman said.

And this image "urgently needs reshaping," Freeman added.

"Technology, government policy, the amazing mobility and flexibility of our society—these forces have been at work for more than three decades, and have meant the rural-to-urban migration of many millions of people," he said.

"Today, one of the first priorities of national policy must be to reverse it completely—to make the Seventies the decade of re-migration."

Freeman said "perhaps the single greatest difficulty" he had as secretary was "gaining support and recognition" of the need for a national policy of rural-urban balance.

Freeman now heads EDP Technology International, a Washington-based computer firm.

Hardin, who succeeded Freeman a year ago, says President Nixon has taken a major step in this direction by setting up a Task Force for Rural America and a Rural Affairs Council to "fashion and implement" a national policy for rural America.

If successful, Hardin says, a reverse migration will result and help relieve some of the population pressures on the large cities.

"The objective is not to depopulate New York or Chicago or Detroit," Hardin has said. "The objective is to change rural America so all Americans will have a genuine choice of where they want to live and work and raise their families."

What is required, Hardin said, is local initiative and the help of the federal government to provide the job opportunities, services and economic climate for moving more people into the countryside instead of the cities.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says cattle prices at mid-January averaged more than a year earlier and that animal weights were up a bit from early 1969.

The Consumer and Marketing Service said all grades of steers sold for slaughter on the Chicago market averaged $29.30 per hundredweight during the week ended Jan. 15, compared with $28.97 a year earlier.

The average weight of all grades was 1,196 pounds, compared with 1,147 pounds a year earlier.

Nigerian Regulars Dissolve

PORT HARCOURT, Nigeria (AP) — The victorious Nigerian army is badly disintegrating inside fallen Biafra and some of its weapons are falling into the hands of hungry mobs raiding food warehouses.

An officer with the international observer team said: "Half the soldiers are missing from many of the units. The soldiers have flogged (sold) their weapons and are wandering about aimlessly. White nurses refuse to come out unless an army guard is placed over their hospitals."

The observer, chatting with reporters, said white Red Cross nurses had been raped at a hospital near Orlu by "hooligan" soldiers from the 3rd Marine Commando Division. They and other white nurses and relief workers are hiding in the bush, afraid to come out.

"The army is out of control," he said. "The government is trying to replace the victory-crazed 3rd Marine Division with the 1st Division, which is a bit cooler."

He said raiding parties, made up mostly of former Ibo soldiers, are using discarded weapons to make daylight attacks on food warehouses and medical supply depots.

Catholic and Protestant missionaries, being taken to Port Harcourt for hours of screening to determine their status with the federal state, complain that while they are away from their stations, food and medical supplies are ransacked by uncontrollable federal troops, who also have commandeered their relief trucks.

Dr. Dieter Eichenlaus, a German doctor at the Ithala hospital near the Uli airstrip, told reporters he had treated two civilians who had been shot in the stomach for refusing to hand over possessions to marauding federal soldiers.

Col. Olusegun Obasanjo, commander of the 3rd Marine Commando Division, said "misbehaving soldiers have been dealt with severely" but refused to comment on reports from other officers that three had been shot for rape.

Public Housing Has Its Second Ground Breaking

Groundbreaking for the second group of Sedalia's controversial low-cost public dwellings took place at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Saline and Brown Streets.

The project will consist of 150 units in 11 buildings on the north side of Saline Street and 11 buildings on the south side. Groundbreaking for 50 units of public housing for the elderly was held at 24th and Engineer last Thursday.

A number of residents and the Committee for Equitable Taxation have expressed opposition to the projects. The CET asked the City Council to repudiate its agreement to accept the title to the 200 units last Friday.

Sometime Tuesday a sign appeared on the north side of Saline, reading: "Site of Sedalia Future Instant Slum" (Public Housing) Created by: Public Housing Authority with the Blessing of the Mayor and City Council. A CET spokesman called the sign the work of a "crank."

Denmark's flag (a large white cross on a red field), known as the Dannebrog or Danish Cross, dates from 1219.

St. Joseph Man Killed in Crash

ELWOOD, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas Highway Patrol said J. E. Applegate, 67, of St. Joseph, Mo., was fatally injured Wednesday night in a collision on the approach to the Pony Express Bridge.

The bridge spans the Missouri River between Elwood and St. Joseph.

Troopers said Applegate's auto was struck from behind, went through a guard rail and plunged 20 feet down an embankment. Applegate was dead on arrival at a St. Joseph hospital.

The driver of the other car was identified as Bill Roesle, also of St. Joseph.

Nixon

the price tag for clean air, clean water and open spaces is high but must be paid now.

"The program I shall propose to Congress will be the most comprehensive and costly program in this field ever in the nation's history," he said.

He said his $10 billion water program would "put modern municipal waste treatment plants in every place in America where they are needed to make our waters clean again, and to do it now."

Nixon also promised to "propose innovative financing methods for purchasing open space and parklands, now, before they are lost to us."

As in most instances, he gave no details, withholding them for a series of special messages to be submitted later.

The President did hint at possible new levies on purchases of new automobiles. Without getting specific, he said that to the extent possible "the price of goods should be made to include the costs of disposing of them without damage to the environment."

He may have had auto junkyards in mind.

Nixon also stated that "the violent and decayed central cities of our great metropolitan complexes are the most conspicuous area of failure in American life."

Again without saying how he would go about it, he said, the federal government must be in a position to assist in the building of new cities and the rebuilding of old ones. And he said the country must "create a new rural environment that will not only stem the migration to urban centers but reverse it."

Nixon, who will submit a written message on foreign policy early in February, said that the nation's first priority "must always be peace for America and the world."

Stating that "the major immediate goal of our foreign policy is to bring an end to the war in Vietnam" in a way to insure a just peace, Nixon declared:

"We are making progress toward that goal."

"The prospects for peace are far greater today than they were a year ago."

The President said that "If we are to have peace in the last third of the 20th Century, a major factor will be the development of a new relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union."

While saying "he would not underestimate our differences," he said "we are moving with precision and purpose from an era of confrontation to an era of negotiation."

He went on: "It is with this same spirit that we have resumed discussions with Communist China in our talks at Warsaw."

"Our concern in our relations with both these nations is to avoid a catastrophic collision and to build a solid basis for peaceful settlement of our differences."

Back on domestic themes, Nixon called anew for "a total reform of our welfare system," implementation of his "new federalism" concept envisioning some powers being returned from Washington to state and local governments, and adoption of "reforms which will expand the range of opportunities for all Americans."

He pictured the federal government as badly in need of reform in many areas, saying:

"It is time to cut putting good money into bad programs. Otherwise we will end up with bad money as well as bad programs."

Discussing inflation, he said: "When I speak of actions which would be beneficial to the American people, I can think of none more important than for the Congress to join this administration in the battle to stop the rise in the cost of living."

He said the federal government during the 1960s spent $57 billion more than it collected in taxes. During the same decade, he said, the living costs of an average family of four increased by $200 per month.

"Millions of Americans are forced to go into debt today," he said, "because the federal government decided to go into debt yesterday. We must balance our federal budget so that American families will have a better chance to balance their family budgets."

The setting for the speech was traditional with members of the Senate, Cabinet, Supreme Court and diplomatic corps shoe-horned into the House chamber for the occasion.

But Nixon served notice ahead of time his speech would not be traditional—it would not be a "laundry list of everything that I will be submitting to Congress later on."

The battle against rising prices is one top priority item on the Nixon 1970 agenda. Tied closely to this is the presidential effort to hold down federal spending under his forthcoming budget for the 1971 fiscal year that begins July 1.

Marking his first anniversary in office Tuesday, Nixon said the budget would be "one of the major subjects discussed, but I am not going into any detail."

principles of white supremacy, and I shall always be so governed."

Discovery of the speech is certain to add fuel to the fight in the Senate which must consider Carswell's nomination soon. There had been reports the Senate might try to speed through the confirmation so the court would be at full strength when it begins handling a heavy case load in late February.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a leader in the successful battle against confirmation of Haynsworth, said: "I want to look at his record since he has been on the federal bench and review his decisions." Regarding the 1948 speech, Bayh commented: "There must be other evidence more significant than that speech."

Two other leading Senate Democrats, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and national party chairman Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, said they had "deep concern" over the report but would not comment further.

Since the City Council voted recently to dispense with the city primary elections, the slate of candidates will be largely drawn up by party leaders.

The choices of the two major parties are expected to be made public following party caucuses in late February. The filing deadline for the April 7 election is March 3.

The incumbent, Republican Ralph Walker, has already firmly ruled out his running again.

The last mayoralty candidate to win on the independent slate was Abe Silverman, more than ten years ago.

Accidents

A one car accident occurred on Warren Ave. near Broadway at 9:21 p.m. Wednesday, when a 1965 Dodge, driven south on Warren by Ora Casdorph, Jr., 18, Route 2, skidded on ice and struck a utility pole.

The car sustained damage to the left fender and headlight and was inoperable. The driver was unhurt.

Twentieth and Carr was the scene of a two car accident at 3:06 p.m. Wednesday involving a 1970 Ford, driven south on Carr by James L. Bonitz, 30, Jefferson City, and a 1965 Ford, driven west on 20th by Hazel M. Robinson, 52, 1804 East 14th.

The left rear portions of both vehicles were damaged.

The 300 block of South Ohio was the scene of a two car accident at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday involving a 1969 Volkswagen, driven north on Ohio by William G. Potter, Ottumwa, and a 1966 Plymouth, driven south on Ohio by Dale Johnson, 52, 2407 Dennis Road.

The left sides of both cars were damaged.

Police Report

Kenneth Wayne Thomas, Route 1, Hughesville, was arrested by Sgt. William Shobe Wednesday afternoon and charged with interfering with a police officer in the line of duty.

Thomas allegedly tried to prevent Shobe and another policeman from removing an illegally parked car from an alley on the 200 block of West Main Street.

Thomas is scheduled to appear in court Jan. 23.

14 less than the week before, the South Vietnamese exactly half what it had been, and the enemy total was 755 less. But the report raised the total number of enemy which the allied forces claim to have killed to 592,952 since Jan. 1, 1961, only 7,048 short of the 600,000 mark.

American battlefield deaths since Jan. 1, 1961, now total 40,226, according to the weekly U.S. Command summaries, while the total for government forces since Jan. 1, 1960, now is 99,090.

South Vietnamese headquarters attributed the drop in the death toll last week to a 60 per cent decrease in the level of enemy activity.

Meanwhile, exploding ammunition killed 13 more Americans Wednesday and wounded three in the Vietnam war's worst accident in three months.

The explosion occurred at an artillery base of the U.S. 199th Light Infantry Brigade 55 miles northeast of Saigon. The troops were unloading ammunition from a truck when one 81mm mortar round apparently fell out. Spokesmen said it was believed the round fell on an open box of propellant charges, which the spokesman said can be set off by impact. Normally mortar rounds are not fused when they are being transported.

The U.S. Command said the nightly enemy rocket and mortar attacks dropped back to only 12 Wednesday night and early Thursday, with no American casualties, after 54 attacks the night before. That had been the heaviest overnight barrage in 4½ months.

Pharmacy Dean Changes Scene

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Dr. Charles William Blissitt, dean of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, has been named to a similar position at the University of Oklahoma, it was announced Wednesday.

Blissitt, 34, became dean of the St. Louis school in 1964.

Farmers on Short End Of Soybean Harvesting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soybean farmers received ten cents per bushel less during harvest last fall while middlemen processors, cashing in on a large backlog of orders, received about 31 cents more for turning out oil and meal, says the Agriculture Department.

However, officials said, as processing plants catch up and if demand stays strong, farmers may have better prices this spring.

The farm processor price spread was cited in a report issued Wednesday by the department.

Officials said the price situation was related to a reduction in the government's price support loan rate for 1969-crop soybeans, a record supply and "strong expansion" in domestic and foreign demand.

Soybean prices paid to farmers during September-December averaged $2.28 per bushel, or ten cents less than a year earlier.

"In contrast to lower soybean prices so far this marketing year," the report said, "soybean oil and meal prices have been up, resulting in the most favorable processing margins since 1965."

The report said the average spot price spread between soybeans and the value of oil and meal obtained from each bushel averaged 50 cents during September - December, compared with 19 cents a year earlier.

The department said uncertainties still persist over world supplies of competing meals and oils and that it is impossible to forecast whether the price spread will continue.

Soybean exports through January 16 totaled 174 million bushels, a boost of 38 million from a year earlier. Officials said exports for the entire year may total 340 million bushels, compared with the previous record of 287 million last season.

But despite the improved outlook for exports and domestic use, the report said, the nation's soybean surplus next fall could be a record 365 million bushels compared with 322 million last Sept. 1 and 166 million in 1967.

Those individuals who have completed high school may enroll for three hours college credit. Those who have not completed high school may enroll on a non-credit basis.

There are no prerequisites for this course. Wayne Isgriggs, sales manager for Western Southern Life Insurance, will be the instructor for this course.

Enrollment for this course is limited to 15 students and positions will be reserved on a first-come first-served basis. Individuals wishing to enroll or who desire more information about this or other evening courses offered at SFCC contact the Student Personnel Office immediately.

Lions View Mental Health Center Work

Members of the Lion's Club viewed a slide presentation by Tom McCulley, Allen Diehl, and Ron Kennedy, members of the Sedalia Sunset Optimist Club, on the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center at Columbia, in their regular meeting Wednesday.

At the meeting, which was presided over by John Mais, Lions Club president, the three men stated that the Columbia clinic has been sending clinical teams to various Missouri towns to help persons with mental problems. This team comes to Sedalia every Tuesday and plans to make bi-weekly visits in the near future.

The Columbia team treated 491 persons in Sedalia in 1968 and 564 cases during the first nine months of 1969. Their counseling involve persons who have problems ranging from broken marriages to drug addiction.

The visiting members of the Optimist Club, who were introduced by Bob Cunningham, program chairman, stated that offices are being set up across from Bothwell Hospital, between Ingram and Hancock on 13th.

The Lions Club pledged its support to the task of helping support the Sedalia Mental Health Center.

Sheriff's deputies at the county jail said Manson told them he had always been clean-shaven until arrested late last year in Independence and charged with car theft.

Manson, 35, shaved with a blade over the weekend under supervision, deputies said. His hair remains shoulder length.

Fresh Produce

In these days when the housewife doesn't give a second thought to the fact that the head of lettuce in the dinner salad may have been moved 1,000 miles or more, she might well be staggered if she knew just how much fresh produce does move across the country each day. The shipments for Dec. 1, 1969, put in terms of rail-car capacity, added up to 2,374 carlots. If it had all been lettuce, it would have totaled 56,976,000 heads. It would be interesting to know how many miles the food served at dinner this evening traveled before it arrived on our dinner plate.

Green Vegetables

So many kinds of bright-green vegetables can be bought at market or grown in home gardens. So many ways to serve them, there's no need ever to tire of something green on the menu.

Green vegetables are important in meals because of the nutrients they contribute, particularly vitamin A value and vitamin C.

Both the intensity of the vegetable's green color and the part of the plant from which it comes are clues to its food value. In general, the greener the vegetable the richer it is in vitamins and minerals. Dark-green leaves may carry several times as much of some nutrients as green stalks (asparagus), green fleshy pods (snap beans), or green immature seeds (shelled peas or lima beans).

Storing Vegetables

Servings you get from a pound of fresh green vegetables may vary considerably because of pods and other waste, and because of some shrink in cooking. For some vegetables, the amount to buy for each serving varies with whether it is to be cooked or served raw.

For frozen vegetables, count on 4 servings per pint package or as stated on the package label. For canned vegetables, a No. 303 can usually provides 4 servings; a No. 2 can 4 or 5 servings; and a No. 2½ can, 6 or 7 servings.

The fresher the green vegetables when you use them, the better. Flavor and crispness, and perhaps some food value too, are lost when the vegetables wilt or are stored.

If you must hold vegetables a day or two before using, refrigerate them.

Keep them moist in the vegetable crisper or other covered container, in the moisture-resistant bag they came in, or in a plastic bag. Be careful not to bruise leafy vegetables in storing. Store peas and beans in the pod if possible, to keep them fresh.

Preparation

To prepare green vegetables for cooking, discard any bruised, wilted, or yellowed outer leaves, and cut off tough or dried stem ends. Scrape off large scales of asparagus that hold sand. Strip kale leaves off the woody midribs.

Wash vegetables thoroughly, using plenty of water for leafy greens. Lift vegetable out of the water instead of pouring the water off the vegetable. That way, grit, which settles to the bottom of the pan, isn't poured back over the vegetable.

Soak brussels sprouts and broccoli 30 minutes to an hour in cold salt water to remove any insects in the tight leaves or flower buds.

Makes Housing Ban

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The Corps of Engineers announced Wednesday it is banning living quarters in all boat-houses on Oklahoma lakes controlled by the Corps.

The Tulsa District head of the Corps, Col. Vernon W. Pinkey, said the ruling will affect about 1,700 boat-houses on Tenkiller Ferry, Eufaula, Fort Gibson and Lake Texoma.

He said permits will be canceled for violators.

"The boathouse regulations prohibit sleeping accommodations, cooking, eating, toilet and shower facilities, refrigeration, television and other items used for ordinary living quarters," Pinkey said.

Pinkey said new regulations also limit the size of private mooring facilities and non-commercial community docks.

An estimated 500 boat-houses are on Lake Texoma and another 250 each at Tenkiller and Eufaula.

Unrest Of Consumer Is Tapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rich vein of consumer unrest was tapped in two days of Federal Trade Commission hearings on proposed action against false supermarket advertising.

The hearing's purpose was to gather testimony on a proposed rule to require supermarkets to have their advertised bargains in stock at or below the price in the ad. FTC surveys of 10 chains found no bargain on the shelf or a higher price for it as much as a quarter of the time.

But witnesses often went beyond the point.

Father Robert McEwen of the Massachusetts Consumer Association said some terms applied to meat were deceiving and sometimes masked poor grades.

McEwen, several welfare mothers and Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., testified in the hearings that closed Wednesday that a lack of competition makes the food advertising practices possible and that the practices work especially against the poor.

The FTC surveys showed the false advertising practices tended to be more prevalent in the ghetto though also present in the suburbs.

McEwen, Berman and Mrs. Virginia Knauer, the President's expert on consumer affairs, all urged that the FTC rule be applied in other areas—autos, furniture, retail drugs.

Labor Councilmen Will Picket Agnew

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Labor Council will station informational pickets at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn the night of a Republican fund-raising dinner next month, Council President Oscar A. Ehrhardt confirmed Wednesday.

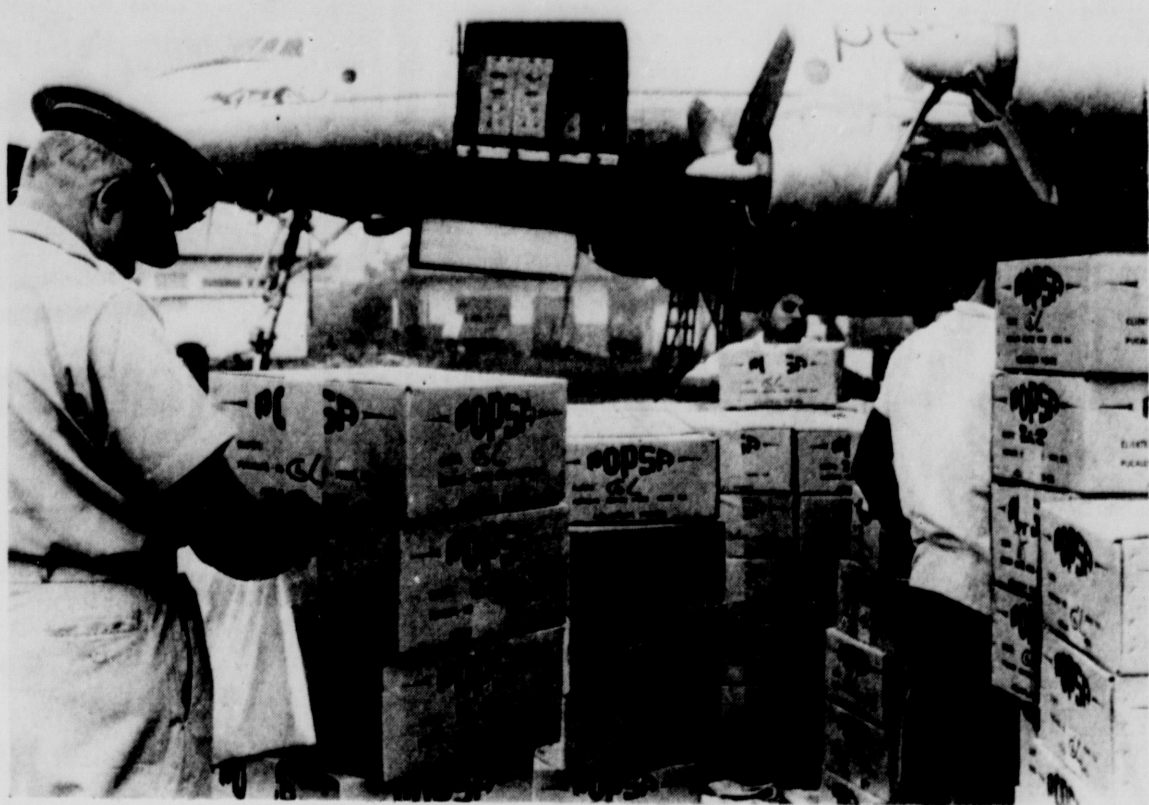

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is scheduled as the principal speaker for the Feb. 10 affair. The state Republican party is attempting to attract 2,000 persons to the $100-a-plate dinner to replenish party coffers.

Employees of Stouffer's are not represented by unions. They voted against representation in a November election.

Fred O. Whaley, chairman of the city Republican Central Committee, said recently his group would not take part in the dinner because of the possibility of union picketing.

State GOP Chairman Elmer E. Smith said "we're aware of the problem and we're trying to solve it."

Wildlife Drain Has Heavy Toll in Amazon

Perishable Goods

Tropical fish from the Amazon are flown to Miami in plastic bags filled with water and oxygen and then boxed. Twenty to 50 per cent of them die en route. The demand for exotic pets makes such traffic profitable, however, and, as a result, many areas of Amazon forest are now devoid of wildlife due to heedless exporting. The International Society for the Protection of Animals, London, is trying to curb this trade before more irreparable damage is done. (AP) major exporter of wild animals in South America. Brazil, Ecuador, Venezuela and Colombia also add to what Walsh calls a "dangerous drain" on wildlife.

"Officials of the governments concerned do not know themselves what a drain this export has been on wildlife," Walsh says. "An ecological survey is desperately needed, before it is too late."

"We would like to see a total ban on animal exports for six months," Walsh says. "During this time, we hope the animals could do some re-breeding, and it would give us time to organize a meaningful survey."

Colombia and Ecuador have agreed to the need for a survey. Walsh says. He has been touring other South American countries, hoping to get complete agreement.

Walsh says an "endangered species" bill is before Congress and "we hope it will pass this year." The bill would prohibit import into the United States of any animal determined to be endangered anywhere in the world.

There was a time when the Amazon was considered a never-ending source of tropical animal, bird and fish life. But the lucrative wildlife trade soared, doubling in the last five years alone.

"As a result, many areas of Amazon forest are now devoid of wildlife, and even traders reluctantly admit that within 50 miles of a settlement, forest mammals are hard to find," reported the Peruvian Times of Lima recently.

Conservationists now worry that many species could soon become extinct.

The Peruvian chinchilla has not been recorded in the wild for many years. Caiman, South American crocodiles, have virtually disappeared: jaguar and Ocelot are on the decline. The vicuna has only recently been given protection by the governments of Bolivia and Peru.

Just how big is the wildlife trade?

No one knows because a lot of the animals are "bootlegged." One estimate is that 150,000 mammals and two million reptiles were imported into the United States alone last year. Most of them flow through Miami.

Net Income Has Worth Despite Inflation Hike

NEW YORK (AP) — With inflation wearing holes in the fabric of the pocketbook, it's nice to know that your net income is really the equivalent of much more than is indicated by your paycheck. Fifty per cent, in some instances.

The "equivalent" comes to you in goods and services provided by your own unpaid activities, such as painting and repairs you do around the house instead of paying outside help to do the job.

Such activities, for reasons unknown, have never been taken into account when assessing a family's economic condition. But, any way you look at it, they constitute productive goods and services.

A pioneer study released by the Institute for Social Research at Ann Arbor, Mich., estimates that the average value of unpaid productivity is nearly $4,000, or roughly 50 per cent of the average family's disposable income.

"This changes the average family income from just over $8,000 to just over $12,000," the Institute reports. "About 90 per cent of this increase," it adds, "is attributable to work done in the home."

The study, by Ismail Abdel-Hamid Sirageldin, and carrying the equally formidable title of "Non-Market Components of National Income," took years of research, so the income figures used are for 1964. Since then money has been inflated by about 20 per cent.

The study documents what many Americans have long known, that enterprising low-income families tend to spread their income more effectively when pressed to make ends meet. Ask any farm family.

"For example," the report states, "for families earning under $1,000 a year, nonmarket income shows an increase of 284 per cent over money income, whereas with families earning over $15,000 the increase is only 13 per cent."

Sirageldin concludes that "people faced with constraints in their market activities strive to improve their standards of living, or to maintain a decent life, by increasing their nonmarket productive activities."

And what are these? Sirageldin puts them into several major groups, including regular housework, painting and repairs, growing own food and canning and freezing, and sewing and mending.

Using a complex formula, Sirageldin estimated that the 1964 value of an hour spent doing housework was $1.31, painting and repairs $2.44, sewing and mending $1.79 and growing food or canning and freezing $1.08.

Awards Tea Will Honor Five DIANA Finalists

Epsilon Sigma Alpha International Sorority is sponsoring the DIANA, Distinguished International Academy of Nobel Achievements, Award and the local Rho Tau chapter is now observing DIANA Award Week, Jan. 19-24.

The award was established by the sorority and designed to recognize a woman in the community who unselfishly gives of herself in any area of service which benefits others. There is only one DIANA Award winner permitted from a city each year, and women outside the Epsilon Sigma Alpha organization are eligible to receive the award. Jackie Stockwood is Rho Tau's chairman for this effort in Sedalia.

During last November local clubs and organizations submitted names of local women for nomination and a committee selected five finalists in December. A panel of judges, chosen from prominent citizens in the area, will select the DIANA winner at the awards tea which will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Farm and Home Building. The tea will honor five finalists, sponsors and judges.

The local DIANA winner will then become a nominee for the International DIANA Award and will be a guest of honor at the presentation at Epsilon Sigma Alpha's international convention in St. Paul, Minn.

Fellini Dislikes Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Federico Fellini, an amiable bear of a man, was in town to show his latest film. His evaluation of Hollywood: A nice place to visit, but he wouldn't want to work here.

His countryman, Michaelangelo Antonioni, did make a film in America, the controversial though still unreleased "Zabriske Point." That wouldn't work for Fellini.

"A man must make a film about what he knows, and I do not know America," said the famed Italian director. "It is all right for a writer to say 'the table' in a book. Put it in different with a director. He cannot say 'the table'; he must show you everything that is on the table. And for that you must know the place."

Fellini came here with his United Artist picture, "Fellini Satyricon," based on Petronius' fragmentary tales of lust and decadence in the Roman Empire. What it's all about, Alfie, I'm not sure; I'll leave that to the highbrow critics to fathom. But it is most certainly a stunning achievement, packed with visual shocks and limitless imagination.

The director himself provided an inkling of his purpose: "The film is not about the Roman Empire at all. It is the story of our civilization today—the desperate search for pleasures, the decadence and alienation, the failure to communicate."

If the world is indeed in the shape that Fellini envisions, then it might be better if we all got off.

"Fellini Satyricon" is not your run-of-the-mill Roman spectacle. All the gore and grotesqueries that the Romans were capable of are portrayed on film. The explicit sex caused the film to be condemned by the Catholic church in Italy—"very good for business; some producers try to pay the priests to have their films condemned."

The scope is immense, yet Fellini claimed: "It is a very cheap picture. I think no more than $2½ million. Most of the sets were impressionistic, you see, painted on a backdrop."

He is displeased with the title. "I wanted 'Satyricon,' but then another Italian company made another version, very quick and very bad, and it was banned by the government. Now I could not use the title, so we tried to think what else we could call it."

"I suggested 'Petronius' Satyricon, but United Artists said nobody would know who Petronius was. They wanted to call it 'Fellini Satyricon.' That sounded immodest to me, and I suggested at least use the apostrophe—'Fellini's Satyricon'—the way it is done with Alfred Hitchcock or William Wyler or other directors. No, they wanted 'Fellini Satyricon.'"

He gave a Roman shrug.

Fellini is now writing his next script, which he plans to begin filming in April.

Corps of Engineers Plan River Traffic

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Corps of Engineers announced Tuesday the Missouri River will be opened to navigation 10 days earlier than usual this spring if ice conditions permit.

Last year ice below main dams blocked a scheduled early opening.

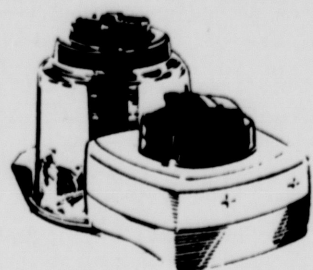

Col. O.H. Tobin, acting Missouri River division engineer, said there is an even chance ice will break up in time for the early opening.

Under the proposal, navigable flow levels would be provided at Sioux City, Iowa, March 13; Omaha, March 15; Kansas City, March 19; and the river's mouth March 22.

Biafra is Symptom of an Ailing Dark Continent

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent
Nigeria's 30-month nightmare of civil war was a warning symptom of what ails the immense continent of Africa.

Lessons for all nations involved, big and small, powerful and weak, are fairly obvious. But nations have an uninspiring record of learning from such lessons, and the outlook for the African continent, as of now, remains gloomy.

Civil and guerrilla war, political instability, poverty, hunger, disease, backwardness, population explosion, division, suspicions—you name it. Africa has it. To complicate all this, its resources and geography make it an arena of global contest. It all threatens to produce, some day, a continental nervous breakdown with repercussions for the rest of the world.

Even after World War II there were only four independent nations in the whole continent: South Africa, Liberia, Egypt and Ethiopia. Then what British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan called "the wind of change" blew the continent abruptly into the 20th century, unready and unable to cope. The avalanche of independence began when Ghana, the former British Ivory Coast, won freedom in 1957. France under Charles de Gaulle began liquidating its empire in 1958. In the 1960s alone, 31 new nations were born from the womb of colonialism. British, French and Belgian.

A sort of reverse, latter-day colonialism dictated frontiers. What had been colonial boundaries were demanded by new leaders as their own, regardless of racial, cultural, religious, tribal and other differences. Now, in a continent of close to 350 million people there are 40-odd states, some far too small to be viable.

In the 1960s there were 15 coups and mutinies, a variety of assassinations, two civil wars, several guerrilla wars.

For many countries the economic outlook is bleak. In 20 nations, the per capita income is less than $100 a year. In the rest it is little better and the highest probably is under $400. Most rely on basic agricultural products.

Some of the black nations find they cannot get along without whites. Their lack of skills cannot be overcome in the near future.

The vast Sahara and formidable mountains divide Africa, north from south. There are many other barriers: such as the arbitrary colonial boundaries of what are now independent states, lack of a common tongue. The north is mostly Moslem, much of it Arabic-speaking. The Islamic conquest of centuries ago failed to surmount the natural barriers. Below the Sahara are pagans and Christians. So the "Africa for Africans" slogan tends to lose meaning, since it is a world wrapped up in a continent, a world of many languages and cultures. Pan-Africanism is a goal for many, but it is distant, if not impossible.

If Africa did not have enough built-in misery of its own, global politics brought more. The West European powers seek to guard what the British call "residual colonial obligations." They value highly the market, the resources and the profits from the former colonial empires. As for the United States, for a long time its policy, seeking stability, seemed centered single-mindedly on anticommunism above all else. But the labels of "left" and "right" are not easily applied to Africa.

The Red Chinese and Russians have been having their own cold war in Africa. The Chinese staked out key areas like Tanzania, Burundi and the little Brazzaville Congo, but they had a tendency to fall on their faces, irking the Africans to the point where they were regarded with deep suspicion and sometimes expelled.

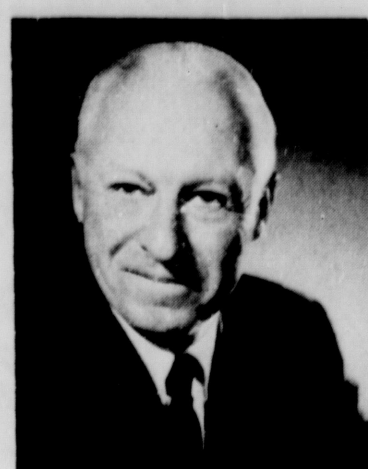

The Chinese aim had seemed to be to produce political and economic chaos to foster revolution. The Russians, more careful, recognized that conditions were unfavorable for forceful Communist takeovers. Moscow based its policy on eliminating other influences wherever possible and on trying to insure that whatever direction a target area might take, it would not be toward the West.

What, then, are the prospects? Many see possibilities of years of violence, war and struggle, with repercussions which can cause acute tension among the major powers. What can be done about it?

Africa needs time and lots of it. The urgent priorities are education, infusion of technology, upgrading backward agricultural methods, solution of ancient land problems, production of decent living standards. Africa lacks sufficient schools. It badly needs improved roads and other transport and communications facilities. It has a severe shortage of people trained in skills needed to construct viable economic and social systems.

Most of all, it needs help. But Africa suspects the help and will continue to suspect it so long as the aid tends to be predicated upon a big power struggle for influence, smacking of colonial days.

The frustrations among the small corps of the literate impel them to seek quick solutions, adopt prefabricated slogans, associate themselves with far-out political notions, because they blame everything that is wrong on imperialism and colonialism, both still frightening bogeys.

Communications Gap

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sgt. Jim Wooten of the state police got a call at his office from a woman at Little Rock who inquired about ice and snow on Interstate 40 to Conway.

Wooten said glaze of ice made the divided highway extremely hazardous especially in the westbound lane, which runs from Little Rock to Conway.

"In other words, if I went up the other lane, I could make it all right?" Wooten quoted her as relaying.

"Wait a minute, ma'am," Wooten said, and began explaining.

Single Woman is Ready For Another IRS Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dainty Vivien Kellems has her dukes up again, ready to take on the Internal Revenue Service in behalf of some 25 million unmarried taxpayers she says are illegally overtaxed $1.6 billion each year.

For some time the feisty 73-year-old spinster from East Haddam, Conn., has been trying to get the IRS to sue her in court but, she says, they refused. Now, she continues, the government has finally made a mistake and she can take the initiative.

The IRS said it had disallowed certain medical expenses and she still owed $813.30 on her 1965 income tax. Not so, says a petition filed Wednesday in the Tax Court of the United States. Miss Kellems is not only entitled to the deduction but is due $2,939.13 for overpayment that year, her petition says.

"The government actually owes me $76,000—$48,000 illegally collected the past 21 years plus 6 per cent interest," she said in an interview.

Miss Kellems fought the government to a standstill in a 1948 case involving the withholding tax. In that fight, a jury returned to her all but $800 of about $8,000 attached from her company's bank account after she refused to withhold taxes from her employees' paychecks. She said she refused to be the government's tax collector.

Now, she contends that the IRS illegally charges a higher rate on net taxable income of single persons.

The disparity in rates, a chart she developed shows, becomes greater the higher the taxable income is. For instance, on a net income of $50,000—after all deductions—a single person would pay $22,590 and a married person $17,060.

Her petition quotes Edwin S. Cohen, assistant secretary of the Treasury for tax policy, as testifying:

"The tax burden on single persons is disproportionately high in relation to that of married persons who enjoy the benefits of income splitting."

She has kept up a lively correspondence with Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy and Jan. 15 wrote referring to her tax form on estimated income:

"I did not send any money, nor am I going to pay any more tax until you have refunded to me $76,323.40, taxes plus 6 per cent interest, illegally taken from me over the past 21 years."

She said Uncle Sam is penalizing "us girls just because we can't get husbands. They could just as legally penalize me because I'm 5-foot-1."

She said there's "just more of us girls and not enough men to go around. I asked Kennedy how many 72-year-old eligibles were available."

Panther Inquest Rules Justifiable Homicide

CHICAGO (AP) — A corner's jury says the fatal shootings of two Black Panther party leaders during a police raid Dec. 4 were justifiable homicide.

None of the seven Panther members who survived the raid testified at the inquest which ended Wednesday.

The interracial jury of prominent Chicagoans deliberated more than five hours before returning its verdict in the slayings of Fred Hampton and Mark Clark.

Hampton, 21, Illinois leader of the party, and Clark, 22, a Peoria party organizer, were killed during a raid on Hampton's West Side apartment.

The verdict said the 14 Chicago policemen who took part had reason to believe use of firearms was "necessary to prevent death or bodily injury to themselves."

The raiding officers related they were met by gunfire when they attempted to serve a search warrant for a cache of weapons reportedly hidden at the flat. Police said they found 10 weapons and a large quantity of ammunition.

Black community groups charged police fired without provocation and killed Hampton as he slept.

Crime Director Is Named in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mayor A.J. Cervantes announced Wednesday the appointment of Curtis Brostron as executive director of the St. Louis Commission on Crime and Law Enforcement.

Brostron is retiring as chief of police Feb. 5. He will assume his new position Feb. 16.

He will serve at an annual salary of $20,000 and will be allowed to engage in police consulting work outside his regular duties with the commission.

Brostron who has served 33 years in law enforcement, said he hoped to bring about community cooperation in efforts to reduce crime in the city.

Garnholz succeeds Dr. Robert Rainey, as head of the Masonic related organization.

Delbert Miller Jr., recently appointed to the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners, was elected to succeed Garnholz as the No. 2 officer for the temple.

Clear Way For Higher Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to put more money into circulation for the hard-hit housing industry, two federal agencies have cleared the way for substantial increases in the maximum interest rates banks can pay on savings deposits.

In addition to helping the housing industry, Tuesday's action by the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was designed to bring commercial and mutual savings banks into keener competition for the investor's dollar.

The announcement was made after a week of almost daily meetings between the Fed, the FDIC and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which is expected to authorize higher rates for savings and loan associations as well.

The Fed and FDIC boosted the maximum rates on bank savings deposits from 4 to 4½ per cent, the first change since Nov. 24, 1964.

On single maturity time deposits of less than $100,000, the two agencies authorized banks to pay 5½ per cent interest on one-year securities and 5¼ per cent on two-year securities. A 5 per cent rate had previously been in effect.

A new ceiling of 7½ per cent was set on time deposits of $100,000 or more. The rate for such deposits left for six months to one year was increased to 7 per cent, while those left a year or more will be eligible for the highest rate.

The interest-rate for savings and loan associations is now 4¼ per cent on regular passbook accounts and 5¼ per cent on certificates of deposit for a specific length of time.

The FDIC said its discussion with the Fed and the FHLBB had resulted in an agreement that the changes do not signal an easing of credit restraint. They are intended, moreover, to maintain the flow of savings into commercial banks and thrift institutions to support housing and other essential financing requirements.

Lutheran Circles Gather

Circles of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League of St. Paul's Lutheran Church met recently to discuss the January topic, "Women and World Missions."

Rebekah Circle met at the home of Mrs. M. R. Geffert, 311 East Broadway, with Mrs. Robert Ackerman conducting the study topic. Mrs. Andrew Melendez conducted the business session and Mrs. Clifford Koenig gave the prayer for missions. Reports were given and cards mailed to out of town church visitors. Calls were made on prospective members within the city.

Rhoda Circle met with Mrs. John Walker, 508 West 10th, where Mrs. Koester was welcomed as visitor. Mrs. Arthur Bethke gave the scripture lesson, prayers and Mite Box devotion. Committee chairmen reported on cards sent and visits made to shut-ins.

Elizabeth Eunice Circle met at the educational building for a desert luncheon. Mrs. Flora Albers was the meeting hostess. Mrs. Henry Heitman presented the topic and articles made in West Africa and sent by a missionary were displayed. Mrs. Sena Schutt gave a memorial she had written in honor of a deceased Circle member, Mrs. Viola Buchholz.

Members discussed the mailings to college students and servicemen, and care of the communion card racks. Mrs. Walter Kroenke gave the Mite Box devotion and read a letter from the Rev. David Houser, New Guinea missionary.

Rachel Circle met at the educational building with Mrs. Don Keller, hostess. Mrs. Kenneth King gave the opening prayer and the Bible study from Luke 8:31-43. Chairman, Mrs. Clifford Hoover, conducted the meeting and plans were completed for serving food to the Mueller family.

Proud Parents Have Big Loss

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The mother of the bride gained a son and the mother of the groom gained a daughter—but they both lost their jewels.

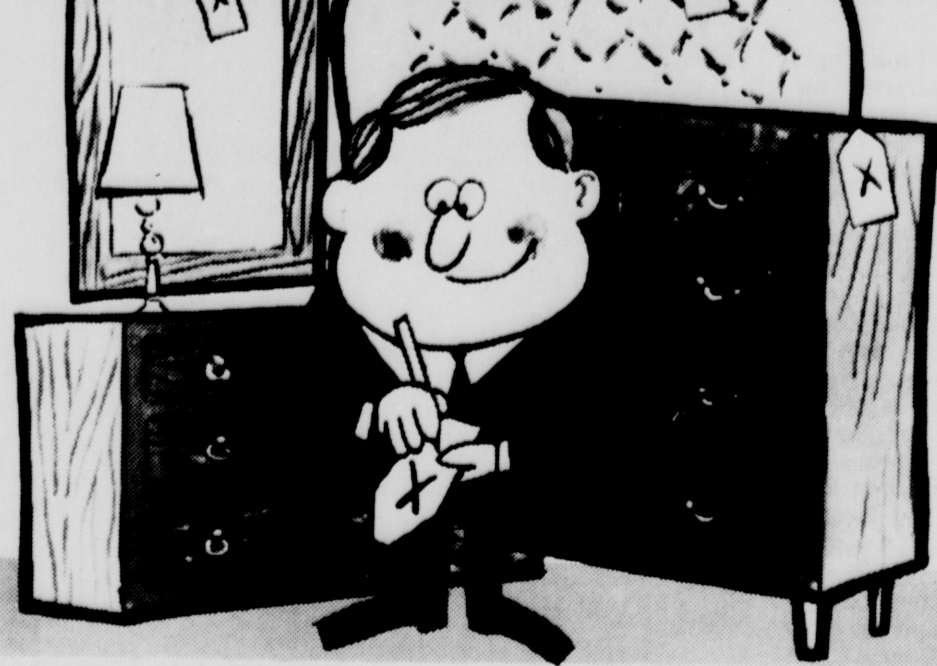

Estelle Renkoff and Leona Kessler danced until the wee hours at the wedding of their son and daughter, respectively, at a Miami Beach hotel Monday. Then they went to their separate homes, only to find them ransacked and their jewels gone.

Police speculated the burglars read of the pending wedding in the newspapers and timed their break-in accordingly.

Young Killer Has Led Life Full of Roughness

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fourteen years after her birth, Debra Mattingly—everyone called her "Muffin"—could say she'd been around.

She had known detention homes, summer camps, courtrooms, hippie crash pads—everything, in short, but stability. So it was easy, when Muffin Mattingly was charged last week with the murder of her adoptive father, a minor District of Columbia official, to quote her friends that she was "tough as nails, the kind of chick who eats nails."

The newspaper pictures—a short, blondish girl looking much older than 14, dragging on a cigarette, dressed in old jeans, sweatshirt and mackinaw jacket—made you forget that Muffin Mattingly was still a child.

And it took a few more questions to elicit the information that for all her tough, dirty talk,

Reward Mounts In Union Theft

UNION, Mo. (AP)—Rewards totaling $16,000 have been posted by a citizens group for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the bombing of the Franklin County Courthouse and bank robberies in Union and Pacific.

Sheriff H.B. Miller said $5,000 is being offered for information about the Nov. 15 bombing of the courthouse and $6,000 in the case of the $18,000 holdup of the United Bank of Union a block from the courthouse. The bank was robbed seconds after the blast, which authorities feel was set off as a diversion.

Damage to the courthouse was estimated at about $160,000.

A $5,000 reward is being offered in the $80,000 robbery of the Citizens Bank of Pacific last spring.

Miller said descriptions of two men involved in the Union robbery and two who held up the Pacific bank are similar.

her love for motorcycles, her fondling of knives, Muffin Mattingly was really a sad little girl who had been kicked around almost since birth.

Also charged with the Jan. 8 murder in the suburban Arlington, Va., home, where Richard L. Mattingly apparently was strangled by having a crowbar pressed against his throat, are two of the wandering young men whose noisy, free lifestyle drew Muffin into their dropout circle.

Three other men are free on bond as material witnesses to the murder. Another alleged witness is a 15-year-old runaway from Amsterdam, N.Y.—a girl known in hippie circles as "Pegasus," whose real name is being kept under wraps by authorities.

The gang that frequented Dupont Circle, a warm-weather hippie gathering place, knew Muffin as "Little Spirit." Eugene Comeau, 19, describing himself as a onetime Hell's Angel from California, was called "Big Spirit." Muffin recently telephoned a counselor and said she had married Comeau, and that they were sitting around fondling their knives.

Comeau is now one of Muffin's co-defendants. So is another wanderer said to be much taken with Comeau's alleged violent fantasies—Kenneth Hitner, a 21-year-old AWOL Marine.

Muffin's parents, destitute, gave her up for adoption when she was only 9 months old. Mattingly, an official of the District of Columbia Board of Condemnation was sued for separation five times by his wife. She succeeded the sixth time, in 1962, and Muffin went with her.

When she died, the girl rejoined Mattingly, and for the next three years life was a succession of runaways and wanderings.

As police tell it, Muffin, Pegasus, Comeau and Hitner went back to Mattingly's house that Thursday night to pick up some of her things. An argument broke out, police said, and Mattingly was killed. His body was found in the basement furnace room.

An apparently undelivered letter to his daughter was found in Richard Mattingly's belongings. "Dear Muffin," it said, "If you come home during my absence today please leave the key so Dad won't have to go to the expense of changing the lock again."

"Needless to say, Dad is disappointed in you!!"

"... You have caused your adoptive father great heartache, worry and disappointment ... Sooner or later, you will be picked up, 'busted' as you say, and Dad will not be able to help you."

Theatrical World is Shaken by 'Salvation'

By WILLIAM GLOVER
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The show is called "Salvation." And that is just what it's turning out to be for the careers of Charles Cane Courtney and Peter Link.

C. C., as he likes to be called, and Link were just another couple of struggling young actors on afternoon TV sudsy serials until they teamed up as song-writing partners and concocted the rock musical that has turned into an off-Broadway jackpot.

As dedicated nonconformists, the pair affect all the external symbols of the young and hippie-long hair, shirty exotica and, depending on mood, bare feet or boots. But, detectable under the cheery 1970 veneer, a couple of shrewdly, old-fashioned talents are at work.

Since "Salvation" opened a few months ago, the two have gotten bids to prepare music for a half dozen movies; organized a pool of singers; gone to work on another stage show; and been retained by the biggest pop music publisher to create a rock music library.

The Courtney-Link opus couples contemporary, ear-splitting sound "it's not rock if it isn't loud," insist the authors with insouciant comment on all the varieties of religious experience from Agnosticism to Zen. Both perform in it.

Impish rather than impious, the show is defended by its creators as critical of dogmatic theology rather than individual faith. One number is "There Ain't No Flies on Jesus," which, says Link, "means that Jesus moves. If he were here today, he would have been at Woodstock — with an electric guitar."

The show derives greatly from the early experiences of Courtney, who at age 12 was preaching the gospel at Baptist gatherings in his native Louisiana. He was born 25 years ago near Ruston, up near the Arkansas boundary.

Link was born in 1945 in St. Louis, to a Christian Science family. "The religious influence was there, but not as strong as with C.C.," he says.

Courtney's dedication continued until his freshman year at Louisiana State University, "at which time in life you get other interests going. Those other interests began to compete and one Sunday morning I was preaching and the girl I had been out with the night before was in the second row. I decided it was very hypocritical of me to stand up there preaching against the very thing I liked to do most, and that until I got it straight in my head which I was going to do, I better stop."

For the next year, C. C. immersed himself among books and emerged from his religious studies bewildered and skeptical. He settled down to a career as a disc jockey and prides himself as the first youth in New Orleans to grow long hair.

Link attended Principia College in Elmhurst, Ill., did municipal opera singing in St. Louis and Kansas City, spent some time as a cowboy further

South Vietnam's Prison Camps Are Far From Grim

By TOM TIEDE
NEA Staff Correspondent
PLEIKU, South Vietnam — (NEA) — Military authorities believe that approximately 30,000 Allied soldiers are presently being held by the Communists as prisoners of war.

The exact figure is unknown — the Reds won't tell. Some 33,400 Allied Troops, including 1,400 Americans, are listed as missing in action. But precisely who are dead, who are alive and who are prisoners is known only to the enemy.

What is known, however, is that those who are prisoners are not having a good time of it. Their diet is meager, their medical treatment crude, their captors often cruel — and their living conditions largely a mess. The Allied command in the war has done everything possible to pressure or shame the Communists into handing captives with decency. Perhaps the most important thing the Allies have done along this line is to set up exemplary prisoner camps of their own.

Like the one here in Pleiku. The local camp is one of six in the country. It covers several dozen acres of a cool hilltop. It houses 1,100 of the more than 30,000 enemy captives now in South Vietnam. And the place is not only adequate.

It's almost pleasant. The camp commander is 39-year-old, U.S.-trained, Maj. Nguyen Van Phan. He's a military cop. He doesn't necessarily like his prisoners, but he does everything but somersault to treat them according to humanitarian dictates.

Incoming prisoners are checked over medically and psychologically. They are photographed and fingerprinted. Copies of the pertinent information is quickly given to the International Red Cross so that prisoners' families can be notified.

The prisoners are then issued two sets of sturdy clothing, one pair of sandals, soap, toothbrush, paste, comb, etc. And then placed in camp routine.

The routine begins at 7 a.m. It ends at 8 p.m. In between, the prisoners are obliged to squeeze in some work, some play, two meals — and as much comradeship as camp security allows.

The work takes many forms. Everything from grass cutting to vegetable growing. There is plenty of grass. And there are plenty of vegetables. The camp has flower and greenery beds all over the crusty landscape. And the half-acre of vegetables includes such items as cabbage, onions and tomatoes. There are two pigs for occasional camp feasts.

The play is divided into two areas. There are a couple of large recreation rooms (Ping-Pong, magazines, dominoes, checkers). And there is an enormous outdoor field (soccer, volleyball, exercise). The daily schedule permits two relaxation periods — between noon and 2 p.m., and after dinner until lights out.

As for the food, it is plentiful and well-prepared. Rice and fish mostly — the Vietnamese staples. It's cooked in clean crockery and served in a suitable mess hall. The men get 700 grams of food a day, about 38 cents-worth, or exactly the ration allowed to enlisted members of the regular Vietnam army.

To be sure, all is not roses for the enemy POWs. There is a loneliness and natural fear in everyone's eyes. There is a sense of defeat, a hint of humiliation — and, most probably, a never-ending longing to escape.

There are, occasionally, brutal guards. Some Vietnamese captors feel the prisoners are pampered. Others just like to bully underdogs. As a result, some nasty incidents have been reported from the compound.

Yet, on balance, life for prisoners here is almost exactly according to the rule book. The camp is immaculate — cleaner than any regular military post in the country. The men are allowed to send and receive letters. Those with families in the south are allowed once-a-month visits. And there is even a token salary for all (eight cents a day) so that inmates can purchase such comfort items as tobacco, sugar and candy.

As camp commander Phan says:

"All in all, we believe we treat the Communist prisoners with the dignity all soldiers deserve. My only wish now is that the Communists would treat our prisoners in the same way."

Business Mirror

Nixon Genuinely Battles Country's Inflation War

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The battle against inflation is to Richard M. Nixon what the Cuban missile crisis was to John F. Kennedy. The consequences might be less, but the pressures are as great and the ordeal is longer.

The question that the President, his staff and the Federal Reserve Board are now asking themselves is this:

How do you break an inflationary psychology without breaking the spirit of the ordinary American and the company he works for and without incurring serious damage to the economic system?

This is the situation. Inflation is now consuming the value of the dollar at an annual rate in excess of 7 per cent, a fact so well known by most Americans that they are determined not to get burned in the future.

Whether it is businessmen or consumers, the nature of their plans is the same: Inflation is going to continue, they say, and so we must protect our interests.

When such an attitude takes hold, some people tend to spend with more abandon than is their custom. There is a tendency also to borrow more on the assumption the debt can be paid in cheaper dollars.

How do you battle such a psychology? Standard practice is for the government to smother demand from both business and consumers by limiting the supply of money, by cutting government spending, by maintaining high taxes.

Standard practice, however, has not proved itself. Mechanically speaking, it should work. But human nature is difficult to fathom. Many Americans refuse to believe inflation will be restrained.

The demands of labor provide a perfect example. On a treadmill for several years, some unions this year are determined to obtain settlements that will protect them against inflation.

Evidence of the psychology is obvious also in the business world. Some professional consultants have stated flatly that inflation will continue, that you must spend to keep pace with it and even borrow to do so.

When such attitudes prevail, there is a natural tendency on the part of government and the Federal Reserve to persist in their efforts also, and so the two sides continue to increase the pressure like combatants in a painful Indian wrestling match.

Increasingly, however, the efforts of government to destroy the inflationary psychology are bringing the economy closer to recession. In fact, some economists routinely described the present economy as in recession.

If the economy, over-all, is not in recession, certain segments are. The housing industry is being changed radically: Housing starts are less than one-half the number needed; small builders are being driven out of business.

How far must the government and the Federal Reserve go to prove they mean to bring inflation under control? How far must they go to convince consumers and businessmen that they mean what they say?

One widely respected economist author, former presidential adviser and consultant to business has forecast a money panic if the Fed doesn't give in and loosen its grip on the money supply.

Decline of American Male

Any woman who complains that "It's a man's world" these days just isn't aware of the true facts of the matter. The allegedly stronger sex is not only physically inferior but, in the opinion of some commentators, is close to the point of psychological demoralization — especially the male species Americanus.

Biologists have long been aware that the female of most animals is basically stronger than the male, and life insurance actuaries have long known that the average woman outlives the average man. The present figures are 73 years for the former and only 68 for the latter.

The alarming thing, however, is that the gap is widening. Last year, for the first time since statistics have been kept, life expectancy of American males decreased—by four months.

At least one biochemist is alarmed, anyway. According to Dr. Henry Sobel, chief of aging research at Sepulveda Veterans Hospital in Los Angeles, the longevity gap between the sexes will soon be 10 years unless something is done.

He recommends a national program to "spare the men" — a campaign to find ways of relieving males of some of the physical and psychological burdens of the kind of life we have created in these United States.

Already handicapped by their biological inferiority, men have to bear the brunt of the stresses and strains of crowded civilization, says Sobel. Overcrowding and stress cause severe declines in the populations of many lower animals, he notes. He's afraid the same thing may happen to human beings and that the decline in male life expectancy may be a sign that it is starting.

"There is something very wrong in a country that has 8 million fathers who have deserted their families; 500,000 divorces a year...9 million widows...20 million mentally ill persons; 60 million alcoholics; 8 million homosexuals...44,000 suicides a year...a plague of juvenile delinquency and drug addiction..." states the society's first newsletter emanating from its headquarters in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Space does not permit a full listing of all the things SEAM finds wrong in America and all of which, it charges, are the fault of the American woman, who has sissified the male and taken over both his pants and his pursestrings.

Such problems don't exist or are far less common in patriarchies, says SEAM. Thus the solution is to restore the American patriarchy, return the male to his rightful place, free him from discriminatory divorce and alimony laws and generally lift from his frail shoulders the burden of feminine tyranny.

It had better be done quickly, for if the good doctor is right, the mere American male doesn't have much longer even to contemplate such heady power.

Hoover Help in Anti-Mafia Campaign

WASHINGTON — Inside the Justice Department's Organized Crime Section, top officials are talking excitedly of breaking the back of the Mafia in the 70s.

Jack Anderson

The weapons will horrify civil libertarians: widespread use of bugs and wiretaps, singling out top hoods for prosecution and harassment, release of raw, unverified information on crime lords.

But Attorney General John Mitchell has subtly let his crime fighters know that he won't object if they need to use a little fire to fight fire.

Also, J. Edgar Hoover, whose obsession with communists blinded his old eyes for years to the Mafia dangers, has at last ordered his agents to cooperate with Justice Department task forces in a city-by-city crime fight.

The late Bobby Kennedy was the first to mobilize all federal law agencies against pre-picked hoodlums on selected turf. But as Attorney General, Kennedy couldn't get Hoover's cooperation. Kennedy's top organized crime fighters once complained to this column that Hoover stalled them every time they requested a Mafia man's criminal records.

So in those bitter days, the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, with less than 300 agents, was looking up more top hoods than the FBI with its thousands of men.

—New Anti-Mafia Laws—

Now, Hoover and his new boss, John Mitchell, see things more alike. In fact, Mitchell's aides have agreed to help Hoover get some powerful new laws to push the Mafia up against the wall.

One bill would make it illegal to travel interstate to shake down a gambling debt. Thus if a big spender piled up a Las Vegas deficit, the Mafia enforcer who crosses a state line to collect the debt would be subject to federal prosecution. Even a mailed inquiry about the debt could mean federal prosecution. This would tend to dry up "credit gambling."

The new gambling laws would bar "point spread" cards from interstate traffic and block information on gambling games from transmission by telephone or wire.

Hoover loves to wager a few dollars on the ponies himself and is careful when he releases FBI statistics on gambling not to include the

Looking Backward

NINETY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Wood in this market is being sold for $4.00 per cord... The part-your-hair-in-the-middle fever is still raging. The devil in the composing room has got it bad... The clash in the fashionable world just now is something fearful. It is between the pretty girls with pretty legs who want to wear short dresses, and those with ugly legs who insist upon having long dresses.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. met at the home of Mrs. A. L. Mudd, 1216 South Kentucky avenue with the following assisting hostesses: Mrs. H. E. Kraemer, Mrs. A. A. Farrell, Mrs. Lowell Glaze and Mrs. Glenn A. Baldwin. Mrs. Peter Hoffman was reelected president for the sixth year; Mrs. Mudd, first vice president; Mrs. J. L. Brooks, second vice president; Mrs. W. M. Shackelford, third vice president; Mrs. A. H. Wilks, fourth vice president; Mrs. O. B. Poundstone, secretary; Mrs. Jesse Saunders, treasurer. Mrs. Ed Demand and Mrs. Jacob Brandt were made honorary members of the executive board.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Girl Scouts making their 18th waste fats drive collected 1,281 pounds, or a total of 15,931. Assisting at the various schools were: Horace Mann, Mrs. A. A. Ferguson; Mark Twain, Mrs. Fred Hulst; Broadway, Mrs. A. A. Studebaker, Washington school, Mrs. Cecil Owen; Sacred Heart, Mrs. Pierre Lamy; St. Patrick's, Mrs. Harold Dean; Jefferson and Whittier, Mrs. Abe Bertman.

parimutuels. But he is acutely aware that illegal gambling is the life-blood of the Mafia. It finances everything from shylocking loans to takeovers of legitimate businesses.

The 70s will see vastly stepped-up use of court-approved electronic snooping. If the tapes are too gossipy and vague for use in prosecution the FBI and Justice will leak them to the press or insert them in court records to make them public. This identifies and shames the Mafia men who often live in fine neighborhoods and pose as ordinary businessmen.

—Talk or Jail—

Justice and the FBI will also use the growing crop of "immunity" laws to blackmail thugs into talking. Under these laws, a judge grants immunity from prosecution to a Mafia man who talks. If he still refuses to answer questions, he goes to jail for contempt of court.

Hoover has thrown an extra 400 agents into the fight against organized crime. Already the drive is paying off. In his preliminary report on FBI action in 1969 Hoover buried the organized crime story back behind the SDS, the communists and other extremists. However, the FBI's progress against organized crime deserves better notice.

New England Cosa Nostra boss Raymond Patriarca was indicted for a gangland murder. His top aide, Gennaro Angiulo, was indicted in connection with a $48,000 robbery. New York's Joe "Joe Bananas" Bonanno, a famed Mafia chief, was arrested by the FBI for conspiring to tamper with court records. New Jersey's Samuel Rizzo DeCavalcante was arrested for violating federal gambling laws. Chicago boss Sam Giancana was harassed out of the country after a year in federal custody for contempt.

In the 70s, therefore, every crime lord in New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Detroit, Miami, Chicago and other cities is expecting the firm knock of the FBI on the front door of his $250,000 home.

—Mormon Prophet—

Three million Mormons looked upon David O. McKay, who died this week in his 96th year, as a prophet in the same sense as Moses or Abraham. There was an inner saintliness about the old man that made this seem credible.

The high and mighty came to his book-lined office where he used to sit behind the old roll-top desk that once belonged to Brigham Young. But he was even more accessible to the meek and humble.

Once, during a tour of England on a busy schedule, he overheard his son Llewellyn turn away a small girl in a blue dress who wanted the prophet's autograph. McKay beckoned his son aside.

"Never hurt a child," he said gently. "Don't underestimate their feelings."

Then he turned to sign the autograph, but the disappointed girl had vanished. Two dozen churchmen combed the crowd for a girl in a blue dress, but she could not be found.

Next day, driving to another town, McKay still had the child uppermost in his mind. He asked the head of the Mormon church in Britain to find her and send her autograph book to him. He was not at ease until this had been accomplished several days later.

Note: At the village of Sauniatu in Samoa stands a monument commemorating McKay's visit in 1921. He had just dismounted from his horse, hung his umbrella on a pulu tree and pronounced a blessing on the village when a woman brought her baby to him to be healed. The child appeared to be dead, but responded miraculously to his laying-on of hands. Now grown, the baby known as Silita is still alive in New Zealand.

Q — When I sold my house I had to pay a penalty on my mortgage because it was paid off early. Is there any deduction for that?

A — The penalty for paying off a mortgage before the due date is considered an interest charge. Include it with your other interest payments if you itemize deductions.

1970: Economic Feast or Famine

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — If government analysts are correct, the economic year ahead will be most curious.

Consider this predicted paradox:

The economy will slow down—perhaps head for a recession. Many more companies than in 1969 will show business declines or grow by less than 5 per cent.

But, at the same time, 1970 will be a boom year for a considerable range of companies and so, presumably, for the men and women who work for them. Some 22 per cent more industries than in 1969 will expand their sales by 10 to 19 per cent.

Emotional and health-conscious buying apparently will have a strong impact.

As of now the experts see:

● An upsurge in luxury and certain other very personal items (such as jewelry, cosmetics, fine luggage, photographic equipment and phonograph records) and a strong (12 per cent) growth in telephone revenues.

● A much slower growth or none at all in a range of "practical" personal and household items (sewing machines and dryers, vacuum cleaners, electric houseware, mattresses and bedsprings).

● Strong gains in medical and other health services, life insurance, surgical and medical supplies and equipment, drugs and pharmaceuticals and items connected with dentistry.

● No gains (despite the population growth) in cigarette (and chewing tobacco) sales.

The pressures on defense and space and the cutbacks in Vietnam will make a mark:

Aircraft, guided missiles and space vehicles will be the hardest hit. The petroleum industry will not do well. Neither will electronics.

But with all this the cost-of-living outlook is bleak. To a considerable degree the flourishing industries are those in which costs are high and going higher (hospital and medical services, luxury items, specially processed foods).

The industries that will be required to fight to hold their own or make small gains in 1970 aren't likely to have the means to reduce prices. They more probably will have to increase their charges to consumers to meet rising overhead costs and to automate further in order to meet growing domestic and foreign competition.

This combination—hard times for some, combined with rapidly increasing prosperity for others, higher food and basic living costs for many and the rise in luxury and super health spending for others—seems likely to stimulate an increase in protests on the campuses and streets.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

The Ravages of Erosion, Abrasion Can Be Halted

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: Recently you wrote about lemon juice and tooth erosion. Will you please advise what can be done when one has erosion to keep it from getting worse?—Mrs. B.J.H. LaCrosse, Wis.

ANSWER: Erosion is a wearing away of the enamel and dentin near the gums, and presents a modified saucer-like appearance.

However, most dentists refer to this wearing away as abrasion rather than erosion. It is generally believed that mechanical wearing away of tooth structure (abrasion) is more often the cause than chemical wearing away (erosion). Poor tooth-brushing habits are a frequent cause of abrasion.

What to do about erosion-abrasion?

If they're not deep and don't threaten to expose the nerve or do not irritate the gums, they can be treated with fluoride compounds. This desensitizes them and can stop or slow up the E-A syndrome.

If the depressions are deep, or if they offend cosmetically, they can be filled with any of the various tooth filling materials which best fit the situation.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: My granddaughter had an accident when she was 18 months old. She hung onto the back bumper of a car and knocked two upper front teeth completely out.

She's 6 now and her permanent teeth haven't come in yet. Do you think she'll ever get her second teeth? And what shall we do about it?—Worried Grandma, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

DEAR WORRIED GRANDMA: You so remind me of my mother who worried like mad because my daughter's front teeth didn't come in when they were supposed to. My daughter didn't get her first baby tooth until she was 13 months old.

Of course there's a small chance that the permanent tooth buds were injured in the accident. And if they were there is further chance that eruption will be delayed or worse. But without any symptoms at the time of accident, it's doubtful if the permanent tooth buds were involved.

A quick look by your dentist should be enough to establish the position of the teeth in the gums. And if he's suspicious that something is wrong, an X ray of the area could help clarify the situation.

A lot of experts feel that it is lowering to their pride to tell their partners that they have a very good hand. We agree with George Gooden that the simpler you make the bidding the better.

North's hand is worth 19 points (17 high cards and two for distribution) and he should respond two spades. South rebids his hearts and then signs off at three no-trump to show his minimum, but North checks for aces by means of Blackwood and bids the slam. He does not bid seven because his partner has shown a minimum by his three no-trump sign-off.

The slam isn't a sure thing by any means. It will make provided trumps divide 3-2 and at least one trump honor is held by East or if they break 4-1 and both trump honors are held by East.

It is up to South to go right after trumps and since he won the first trick in dummy he leads a trump and plays his 10. This loses to West's king and business is looking up.

West plays a spade. South is in dummy again and leads a second heart to his queen. Now he is going to lose only one trump trick but there is still a slight problem. He has a potential loser in diamonds.

There are several ways to get rid of it, but the simple one is to use dummy's last trump to ruff it.

Then back to his hand with the ace of clubs to draw East's last trump and the slam has been made.

As a point of interest, a lot of duplicate players might cry for six no-trump.

Older, But Just the Same

By BETTY CANARY

Who hasn't wondered what he will be like when he has aged? At one time or another I think we have all wished we could have a sort of preview, a cordial invitation to see how well we'll wear with the years. I am still in the dark about it, but, at the least, I have made one discovery. I doubt that anyone changes radically with age. I believe we only grow more the way we always were.

I went with a friend to visit her aunt in a nursing home. It was not my first visit. In fact, some years ago my mother operated a convalescent home. Therefore, I know first-hand some of the problems of both patients and staff.

During the visit last week we met two women, close in age, but complete opposites in personality. Neither was suffering from severe illness; neither was well enough to live alone without care.

The first woman greeted us fiercely with, "I hope he's satisfied now that I'm cooped up in here!"

Her lunch was served. An aide set down the pink tray, helped her wash her hands, saw she was comfortably seated. She looked at the tray. "None of this is fit to eat. Besides, it's cold. And, look at this," she whined, stabbing some broccoli with a fork, "the doctor says I can't eat green vegetables because I'll get indigestion."

The aide explained that her doctor knew the menu and she was served nothing that wouldn't agree with her. "Why don't you enjoy it?" she coaxed. "Your son's coming this afternoon and you'll want to change your dress and rest before he gets here."

"I'll bet he doesn't come," the woman said. "He should be ashamed to face me!" Finally, the food now thoroughly cold, she ate, pausing between bites only to complain bitterly that not only was she not allowed to walk outside, but the nurses were rude and nobody did any work around the place. She could hear them at the desk outside, laughing and talking all the time.

The second woman? Although her room was only a few short steps down the hall, it was like leaving the Arctic and walking into warm sunshine.

She had enjoyed her lunch. It was delicious. "They take such good care of me here," she said, "and I really feel better because I didn't cook the right things for myself at home." She laughed and told us in a confidential tone, "the truth is, I never was a very good cook!"

Her son couldn't come to see her this week because there was illness in his family. "I'd like him to come every day but, of course, I know he can't," she said. "He's a fine man," she told us, "he does as much as he can."

And she told us about a night nurse who had a sick child. She was happy for the nurse who was expecting her first grandchild. And, she wondered, had we noticed the pyracantha that grew outside the window?

Smurk In Your Eyes

Oregonians are, reluctantly, adding a new word to the vocabulary — "smurk."

Just as smog is a combination of smoke and fog, smurk is a mixture of smoke and a murky atmosphere. This fall was the smurkiest on record for Oregon's lush Willamette Valley, the grass seed capital of the world.

The cause was the burning of 700,000 tons of straw left behind on farms after harvesting 240,000 acres of lawn, turf and range grass seed. This put an estimated 5,520 tons of smoke solids into the air and led to a seven-day emergency ban against burning in August. Doctors treated 183 persons adversely affected by the pollution in and around the city of Eugene.

It's the old question of economics. Farmers claim that the burning controls plant diseases that attack the seed crop, destroys weeds and is a low-cost way of getting rid of the straw. They point to the fact that grass seed has a $300-million impact on Oregon's economy.

Others claim that the bad name smurk is giving the area has knocked the tourist business down by 20 per cent.

Meanwhile, crash programs are under way in Oregon universities to find practical uses for the straw and alternative means of coping with plant diseases and weeds.

Thought for Today

The 1970s absolutely must be the years when America pays its debt to the past by reclaiming the purity of its air, its waters and our living environment. It is literally now or never.

—President Nixon, pledging a fight on pollution.

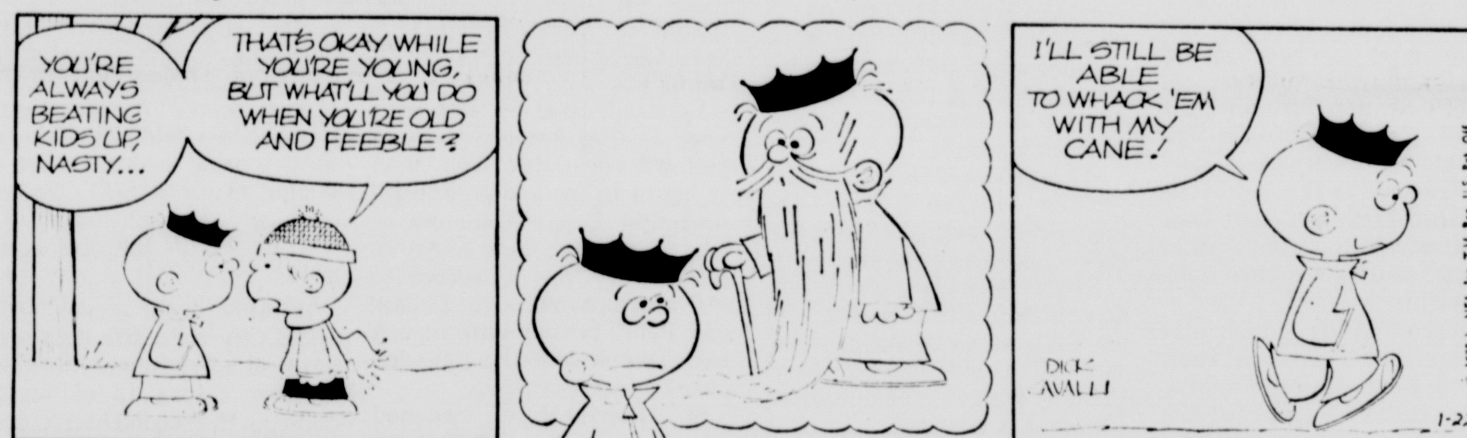

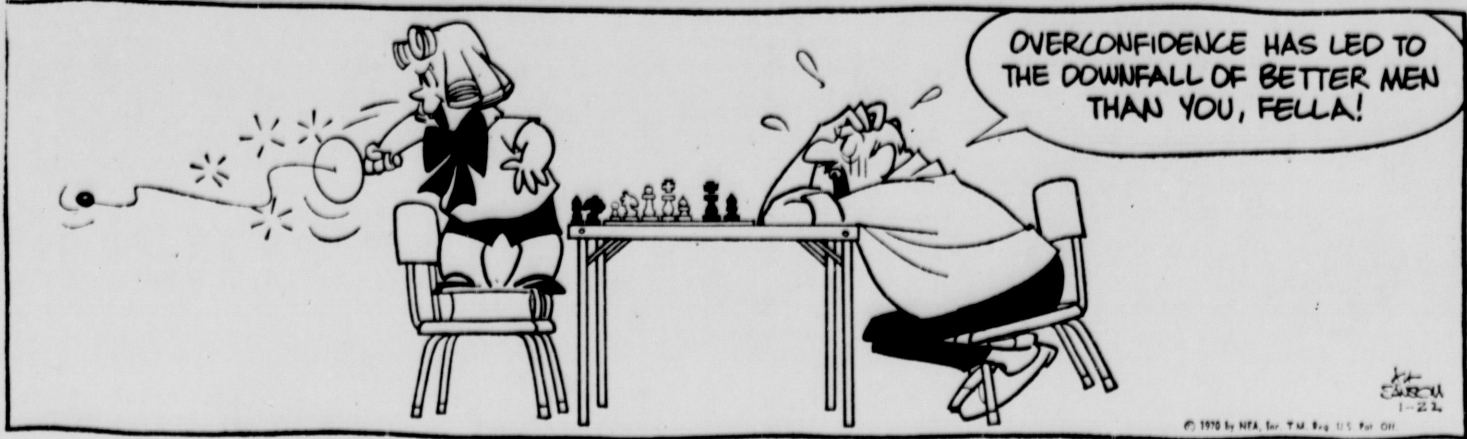

They go from strength to strength; the God of gods will be seen in Zion. — Psalms 84:7.

People do not lack strength. They lack will. — Victor Hugo, French novelist.

Baby Christening Set Was Once Wedding Dress

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. J. W. B. wanted to know some ways she could use her wedding dress. My aunt bought a pattern and made a beautiful baby christening set from the material in my wedding gown. She used the satin for the long baby dress, slip and bonnet and trimmed them with lace. She even made rosettes from the satin to trim the bottom of the dress and the bonnet. This is a very lovely set and means much more to me than any christening outfit I could have bought. My seven children have all used this outfit.—MRS. E. M.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—My favorite brother-in-law, now in Vietnam, has always praised my cooking. I would like to send him some cookies and cakes but I do not know how to keep them fresh and not have them crumble. Can someone give me some Pointers on what has proved successful for them and any other ideas about what to send?—ANN

DEAR POLLY—I have a time, money and disposition saver. When painting, I thrust the hand that wields the brush into a cellophane bread bag, slip a rubber band up my arm near the open end of the sack and this leaves my fingers completely free for manipulating the brush. No paint to be removed from the hand and arm and just a sack to discard.—GRACE

DEAR POLLY—After tightening the screw in my scissors I coat it with a layer of colorless nail polish and it does not work loose so quickly. If I win a Polly Dollar it will go to our church for its mission project.—MRS. B. T.

DEAR POLLY—I use a metal bed tray with legs in my kitchen cupboard and this gives me an extra shelf for storing things. It could also be used in any other cupboard where an extra shelf was needed.—CLARA

Smith-Cotton, S-H Grems In Middle of Loop Races

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

Coaches Jim Dinsdale of the Smith-Cotton varsity Tigers and his counterpart at Sacred Heart, Mike Brosnahan are making themselves well known in their respective conferences and the central Missouri area.

To date the Smith-Cotton mentor has guided his squad to a 7-4 record, while Brosnahan can boast a mark of 11-6.

Although the Tigers are currently standing at 0-1 in Central Missouri Conference play, they have forged out wins over some tough area opponents.

Sacred Heart on the other hand, who is a member of the strong Kaysinger Conference, is sporting a 2-1 slate in that league.

Sacred Heart is currently running behind Lincoln, Warsaw and Cole Camp, who are all undefeated in conference play and LaMonte, who is 3-1.

At the present time, those five teams are all in the thick of the conference battle.

An interesting note on the Warsaw team; they defeated a "so-so" strong Clinton team in the Warsaw Tournament a few weeks ago, but turned around and lost to the Cardinals just Tuesday night.

Lincoln likewise almost fell in action Tuesday night to a weak Calhoun Eagles squad.

Cole Camp probably will be the biggest threat to these two teams for top conference honors this season, but look out next year, the Cole Camp Blue Birds will return a number of this year's starters.

Sacred Heart has come on strong in the last month of action and stands a good chance of winning the loop's crown, if they can pull off a couple of upsets in late season play.

LaMonte is also playing well, but a "hard nosed" Sacred Heart team downed the Vikings at LaMonte two weeks ago.

The teams now settled in the "halfway up" division of the Kaysinger Conference. Stover and Smithton, could play the parts of spoilers as the season draws to a close in mid-February.

S.W. Bears Remain In The Top 20

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The unbeaten Lumberjacks of Stephen F. Austin rule the roost in small college basketball for the second successive week.

Stephen F. Austin, which ran its season record to 4-0 Monday night with a 90-71 victory over Southwest Texas, increased its lead over runner-up Kentucky Wesleyan Wednesday in The Associated Press' national college division rankings.

The Lumberjacks received five first place votes and 190 points in the weekly poll of sports writers and sportscasters. Kentucky Wesleyan, 11-2 through games of last weekend, had two first place votes and 158 points.

No. 3 Ashland, 12-1, also picked up two firsts while No. 4 Youngstown, 12-0, and No. 9 Puget Sound, 10-2, divided the remaining two.

Recruiting Violation Reason for Leaving

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — An assistant football coach at Kansas State University has been released because of a recruiting violation, Dr. C. Clyde Jones, vice president of university development, said Wednesday night.

Jones issued a statement regarding rumors over the resignation of Dick Steinberg, an offensive backfield coach.

"It was known at the beginning of the football season that Dick Steinberg was involved in a recruiting violation," the statement said.

"Steinberg admitted his involvement and was given the opportunity to resign at the end of the football season. He was then permitted to finish his contract, effective Jan. 31.

"The recruiting irregularity is under investigation by the NCAA and the Big Eight Conference."

There was no other comment available on the statement or the investigation.

There are only two teams in the conference that seem to be the have-nots, Green Ridge and Northwest of Hughesville and the conference game they play, will probably decide who ends up in the league's cellar.

In the Central Missouri Conference, a loop that stretches from Sedalia to Hannibal, currently finds the Hannibal Pirates in the league's top spot at 4-0.

Mexico follows with a mark of 1-1; then comes Columbia at 1-2; Sedalia is standing at 0-1, while the Jefferson City Jays are winless in two conference outings.

A crucial CMC game is set for the Smith-Cotton gym Friday night when the Tigers will entertain Columbia.

In the only other conference action Mexico will be at Jefferson City.

Saturday night, Mexico plays at Van-Far in non-loop competition and likewise for Hannibal at Pittsfield, Ill.

In the Kaysinger Conference, Warsaw travels to LaMonte; Green Ridge is at Sacred Heart; Northwest of Hughesville; Stover will travel to Lincoln and Cole Camp will tangle with Smithton at Smithton.

No Missouri junior colleges were named in the weekly top 20 NJCAA poll.

See Easy Approval

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The way appeared clear today for common council approval of a 20-year lease for use of an expanded Memorial Auditorium by Buffalo's new team in the National Hockey League.

Club officials met Wednesday with Mayor Frank A. Sedita and councilmen agreed to pay the city 15 per cent of hockey concessions. The team had offered 10 per cent in its proposal and the city asked for an additional five per cent.

Chicago Gives Up Choice

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Chicago Bears, once feared as the Monsters of the Midway, hope to climb out of the pro football shadows with the aid of three members of a more recent dynasty, the Green Bay Packers.

The Bears gave their No. 1 pick in the upcoming Jan. 27 college draft to Green Bay Wednesday for running back Elijah Pitts, outside linebacker Lee Roy Caffey and center Bob Hyland.

There also were two interconference trades in the new National Football League.

The major one saw the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Conference send veteran quarterback Charley Johnson and Bob Atkins, a cornerback and wide receiver, to Houston of the American Conference for Pete Beathard, also a veteran quarterback, and star corner back Miller Farr.

Chicago's other trade also was an interconference swap with the Bears dealing offensive tackle Rufus Mayes to the American Cincinnati Bengals for defensive tackle Bill Staley and defensive end Harry Gunner.

In the only other trade, the National Los Angeles Rams sent reserve center Frank Marchlewski to the National New Orleans Saints for an undisclosed draft choice.

"We would have liked to have afforded the luxury of taking our first-round draft, but we had to do something now and not for the future," said Chicago Coach Jim Dooley. "With what we get in the draft and in other trades, we can get the Bears back as winners again."

The Bears won four NFL titles from 1940 through 1946, didn't win another one until 1963 and then sank to a 1-13 record this past season, the worst in their 50-year history.

Pitts and Caffey each played on NFL champions from 1965 through 1967 for the Packers who obviously are thinking of the future. Their acquired draft choice will enable them to pick second in the first round, behind Pittsburgh.

The Johnson-Beathard trade hinged around Miller Farr.

"We had problems last season on pass defense at cornerback," said St. Louis Coach Charley Winner. "We started searching for a solid, experienced man at

Light Activity In Basketball On Wednesday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas Wesleyan bumped an obstinate Bethany squad 81-75 in a Kansas Conference Northern Division opener on a light night of basketball activity Wednesday night.

Wichita Sacred Heart drubbed Missouri Western 91-76 and Ottawa belted Sterling 71-60 in the only other games played.

Kansas Wesleyan, sparked by Dave McMullen's 22 points, held off a late surge by the Swedes, now 3-9. Gene Thomas paced Bethany with 25 points. Kansas Wesleyan is now 12-1.

Wichita Sacred Heart, 84, had five men in double figures with Reggie Shields leading the way with 18 points. Tim Turner scored 20 for Missouri Western, 7-9.

Ottawa had little difficulty in turning back Sterling in a non-divisional Kansas Conference game. The Braves, 3-10, were led by Jack Scalia's 16 points. Sterling, 5-8, was paced by Dennis Maley with 17 points and Lonnie Kruse with 16.

The game was scheduled Saturday but heavy snow forced postponement. It does not count in conference standings.

corner. We knew Farr was a good man. He played in the last AFL All-Star game, and we tried to get him. It turned out Houston wanted Johnson so we negotiated a package deal."

Beathard was the regular for Houston the last three seasons but was publicly criticized by owner S.K. "Bud" Adams after the Oilers' 56-7 blasting by Oakland in the recent AFL playoffs.

Acquired by Cincinnati

The Cincinnati Bengals acquired offensive tackle Rufus Mayes from the Chicago Bears Wednesday in exchange for defensive tackle Bill Staley and defensive end Harry Gunner. Mayes (shown above) was an All-American standout at Ohio State. He also was the first round draft choice of the Bears last year. (UPI)

Pilots Financially Weak, Businessmen Want to Buy

SEATTLE (AP) — The city of Seattle, certain the game is lost on the financial scoreboard, is ready to try a legal appeals play as "a last resort" to keep its American League baseball franchise.

Mayor Wes Uhlman said at a news conference Wednesday financial efforts to keep the team apparently have broken down. If the Pilots are pulled out of Seattle the American League and Pacific Northwest Sports, Inc., owner of the team, will be defendants in a multimillion dollar lawsuit, he declared.

The league gave Fred Danz, the Seattle businessman heading a local group trying to buy the Pilots, until 2 p.m. today to meet certain conditions, including financing a $3.5 million loan owed the Bank of California.

But Danz said as far as his group was concerned today's deadline had no meaning.

"It's just a number pulled out of thin air," he said. "A more realistic deadline is Jan. 27 when the league owners meet and reach a decision. In fact, financing is not as important a factor as it might appear to be. The important factor is whether the American League wants to keep the team in the Pacific Northwest."

What the league wants to do is anybody's guess. William Daley of Cleveland and Dewey Soriano of Seattle, principal officers of the Pilots, reportedly were in Dallas Tuesday to talk with Texas magnate Tommy Mercer about the franchise. Milwaukee also is hard on the heels of the franchise, if the league gives it a travel permit.

But whatever the factors and deadlines, Uhlman said the city has no intention of losing the franchise without a fight. He said a suit, if necessary, would be filed to protect the taxpayers' interest and investment in the franchise.

That interest includes $3 million spent by the city to refurbish Sicks' Stadium, the Pilots' interim facility, and a voter-approval bond issue to build a multipurpose $40 million domed stadium by 1973.

"What has happened to Seattle in this whole mess should not be perpetrated on any other cities," Uhlman said. "Baseball is too much of a civic activity and a public endeavor to permit a few franchise owners to make a substantial amount of money by transferring these monopolies."

"Seattle has committed too much for the American League and the Pilots' owners simply to walk out on our city," Uhlman added about the expansion club's one-year tenancy.

The legal action could follow any of three courses, Uhlman said: action for breach of lease agreement, action for damages in amount the city expended to improve the stadium, or triple damages under antitrust laws.

Uhlman said he sent a telegram to American League President Joe Cronin asking that the city be allowed to present its case.

"I have been assured business leadership will supply sufficient funds to operate for 1970 and negotiate satisfactory sale of team to new group of substantial citizens," Uhlman said.

In addition to Uhlman, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., Gov. Dan Evans and Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton also wired Cronin.

Uhlman also said he talked to Magnuson and Jackson about the possibility of legislation "specifically making major league baseball subject to anti-trust laws."

Magnuson said he would support any such legislation if the franchise were moved.

Champion Foster Ready to Defend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Light heavyweight Champion Bob Foster says he has a new manager and is ready to defend his title against No. 2 challenger Mark Tesson. The Washington Post said today.

Foster was quoted as saying his new manager is Lou Viscusi of Tampa, Fla., who handled former featherweight champ Willie Pep and now manages Manny Gonzales, the first-rated welterweight contender.

Foster, who lives in suburban Silver Spring, Md., expects to fight Tesson in March at Houston's Astrodome.

Dick Tiger of Nigeria is ranked as the No. 1 contender, but he lost the light heavyweight crown to Foster on a fourth round knockout in May 1968.

Consider Changes In Blocking Rules

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — College football may become a more genteel art in the future with referees turning to the old boxing cry of "Keep 'Em Up."

Hitting below the belt, long a taboo in the ring, has always been a required skill for football's blockers.

If NCAA rulesmakers have their way, the day will come when blocking will be permitted above the beltline only as a safeguard against the rising toll of leg and ankle injuries.

The men who draw guidelines for college football wrapped up a three-day meeting here Wednesday by announcing 41 new rules and several rules changes.

Feb. 16 and March 9 in the downtown Sam Houston Coliseum.

Kerner had expressed interest in a Houston NBA franchise but recently indicated he does not believe the town is ready to back such an investment.

Houston was a charter member in the American Basketball Association but the team transferred to North Carolina last year because of poor support.

Rothenberg reportedly has submitted a letter from Connally confirming the availability of the 10,000-seat Hofheinz Pavilion at the University of Houston.

There has been no confirmation from the university but Harry Fouke, athletic director, said the school policy does not preclude an NBA team playing on the campus.

Jim Dickey Joins Coaches at O.U.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State University's defensive secondary coach, Jim Dickey, will join the University of Oklahoma football staff in a similar capacity, it was announced Wednesday.

"Many people may feel this is unusual for me to hire a coach from a rival school," said OU head coach Chuck Fairbanks, "but Coach Dickey and I have maintained many years of close association after having worked together at the University of Houston."

Dickey, 36, and Fairbanks were assistant coaches at Houston in 1963-64-65. Dickey left for Oklahoma State and Fairbanks for Oklahoma in 1966.

Dickey was the lone member of Phil Cutchin's coaching staff to be retained when Floyd Gass took over at OSU last February.

Gass was out of town Wednesday night and unavailable for comment.

Dickey replaces Billy Gray, who resigned recently to enter private business. Dickey's appointment must be approved by the OU Board of Regents.

Knob Noster, who almost upset Warrensburg in the recently completed first place contest of the Knob Noster Tournament is seeded fourth.

Other teams that will compete for the crown are

Indiana Wins On Late Points, Buccaneers Fall

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indiana's Roger Brown burned Kentucky in the stretch, but Steve Jones' one-man rally fell short of the mark for New Orleans.

Brown scored eight of Indiana's last 11 points, including six successive free throws, as the Pacers held off Kentucky 97-90 in one of two American Basketball Association.

Indiana increased its Eastern Division lead over second-place Kentucky to 9½ games. Brown and Bob Netolicky each finishing with 25 points to set the pace.

Louie Dampier and Darel Carrier hit 21 apiece for the Colonels, who led 77-75 in the final period before Brown keyed the home club's winning rally.

Jones came off the New Orleans bench in the last quarter and shot the Buccaneers to a 94-91 lead. But Tom Workman tied it with a three-point play and field goals by Andy Anderson and Craig Raymond wrapped it up for the visiting Stars.

George Stone topped Los Angeles with 20 points, one more than Workman and Anderson. Steve Jones was high with 22 for the Bucs, whose Western Division lead over idle Denver was trimmed to three games.

Eight Cards Sign

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Eight more St. Louis Cardinals have signed 1970 baseball contracts. Jim Toomey, assistant to the general manager, announced Wednesday. That brought the total signed to 23.

All eight were with minor league clubs last year except Parker, who was in the Army.

Sherwood, a Class M high school, will open the tourney Wednesday, when they tip off against host Clinton.

Knob Noster is slated to go against Windsor in the second game of the opening night.

The Sherwood contest is scheduled for 7 p.m., while Knob Noster and Windsor will battle at 8:30 p.m.

Cardinals-Houston Trade Pleases Charley Johnson

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis quarterback Charley Johnson is pleased that he has been traded to the Houston Oilers.

Johnson, contacted in Newport News, Va., described the trade as "a great opportunity to be with a great organization like Houston and to rejoin Coach Wally Lemm, who I liked so much at St. Louis. We had an excellent relationship and I'm looking forward to playing for him again."

Lemm said in Houston he has a high regard for Johnson and expects him to fit in quickly.

"We basically use the same system we used when I coached the Big Red, so we figured we are getting a quarterback who can step right in," Lemm added.

The trade saw Johnson and cornerback Bob Atkins going to Houston in exchange for quarterback Pete Beathard and cornerback Miller Farr.

Johnson, 31, a native of Big Springs, Tex., played his college football at New Mexico State. He joined the Cardinals in 1961 and became starting quarterback midway through the 1968 season.

He was called into the Army in 1967 and 1968 and was available to the Cardinals only on weekends. Since his discharge, he has shared quarterbacking chores with Jim Hart.

Johnson holds all St. Louis passing records.

Beathard, 27, played at Southern California. He was the top draft choice of the Kansas City Chiefs in 1964 but saw only limited service for three years before he was traded to Houston.

But Houston owner S. Bud Adams Jr. was openly critical of Beathard after the Oilers 57-

7 shellacking at the hands of Oakland, in a playoff game this season.

Farr, 26, a Wichita State product, played one year for San Diego and three for Houston. At Houston he was named to the All-League defensive unit twice a nd was the cornerback on the combined NFL-AFL team after the 1968 season.

Atkins, a two-year man, played at left cornerback for St. Louis in 1968. He was called to active duty with the Army last year and lost his job to rookie Roger Wehrli.

NBA Doubleheader

HOUSTON (AP) — Elvin Hayes and Lou Alcindor face each other again tonight in a National Basketball Association doubleheader amid speculation that Houston may soon become one of the NBA's newest cities.

Alcindor and the Milwaukee Bucks meet Hayes and the San Diego Rockets in the 9 p.m. CST second game after the Los Angeles Lakers and the San Francisco Warriors open the program.

A crowd of about 25,000 is expected for the Astrodome doubleheader which would be considerably short of the 41,163 official count given for the NBA's first twin bill in the Astrodome a year ago.

An Alcindor-Hayes match drew 52,693 fans to the Astrodome in 1967 but this time both were college players. Hayes' University of Houston Cougars defeated Alcindor and the UCLA Bruins in that one, 71-69, snapping the Californians' 47-game winning streak.

In all, college and professional Hayes and Alcindor have met seven times, Alcindor winning six.

Houston reportedly is among four cities offered NBA expansion franchises. The franchise was offered to a California group headed by Alan I. Rothenberg, vice president of the Lakers. The group has retained former Texas Gov. John Connally, now a Houston attorney.

The NBA doubleheader is being promoted by Ben Kerner, former owner of the St. Louis Hawks. He also will promote single NBA games to follow

NY Yankees Named In a Draft Charge

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It'll be a spell before they erect one of those center-field monuments in Yankee Stadium to Jimmy Babyak, but he's as well known to New York brass today as any 15-game minor leaguer in history.

"Who knows what promise Babyak has," said Johnny Johnson, the Yankee vice president who handles player personnel. "Since those 15 games in 1967 he hasn't been to bat once."

Babyak was the central—but missing—figure Wednesday at a five-hour court hearing regarding a Miami attorney's charge that the American League club silently retained him to help the youngster stay out of the military draft two years ago.

George Foss, the 45-year-old lawyer, claimed the Yanks owed him $1,984 in legal fees for 50 hours work on the Babyak case. He testified at a hearing before Broward County Court of Record Judge Humes Lasher.

Johnson denied that the former powerhouse Yankees agreed to participate in the deal, but admitted meeting with Foss and Babyak at the player's request on April 10, 1968.

"Babyak had come to me with tears in his eyes for two weeks over his draft reclassification to 1-A," Johnson said. "Jim asked me to talk with the lawyer he was retaining to help him find some legal way to fulfill his obligation and remain active in baseball."

That confab was just five days before Babyak was scheduled for induction into the Army. Foss' efforts failed, he testified, and the 20-year-old, Hampton, Mass., player was inducted and en route to Fort Jackson, S.C., by April 16.

Babyak was injured in Vietnam and discharged last August.

Johnson said the infielder played in the Florida Instructional League at Clearwater through Nov. 22 and is due to sign a Yankee farm club contract for the 1970 season. Babyak played 15 days in 1967 as a minor league Yankee.

Johnson testified that he "continually advises" players on Selective Service matters and added, "I will do anything legal to keep the players on the field."

NBC Offers New Series Wednesday

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Three

new series were offered by ABC Wednesday night, two hours of music and one half-hour situation comedy.

"The Johnny Cash Show" is not exactly new since it was on ABC last summer. "The Engelbert Humperdinck Show" stars the pleasant-voiced English singing star in an easy-paced and low-key hour. In Tandem, they ought to do nicely.

Cash's hour is produced in Nashville and almost everyone on the show carries a guitar. The music, by and large, is ballad with a beat. Country-western in mood and certainly in idiom, it is dominated by the interesting personality and style of the star. The program, in spite of being shot in an auditorium that looks as big as Monaco, has a family feel about it, partly because Cash's wife and members of her family appear as a singing group but also because of the warm response by the program's Nashville audience.

Perhaps the most distinctive feature of the premiere was a mini-musical documentary. As Cash sang "Ribbon of Steel" and "Casey Jones," and filled in the narration, the screen was filled with old pictures and old posters telling of the building of the transcontinental railroad track more than 100 years ago.

Humperdinck's hour is almost entirely music, mostly middle-of-the-road numbers including old standards, the host, who has gracious and relaxed manner, strolled easily through the proceedings.

Two solid hours of musical entertainment may be a little much, particularly when television seems overendowed with shows of the same general stripe.

"The Nanny and the Professor" which started the evening schedule, obviously drew its inspiration from Mary Poppins, although the execution is considerably short of inspired.

The governess, played by pretty and English Juliet Mills, is possessed of assorted supernatural powers. Her mysterious arrival from England to our screens suggested a relationship to "The Flying Nun."

She knows, without being told, everybody's business, strangers' names and she converses with assorted animals including her pet guinea pig and the family dog.

Nanny is absorbed instantly into the household of widowed Professor Everett and his three unruly, but cute, kids. Her first triumph is to have the family sheep dog win a local dog show.

BERLIN (AP) — East German harassment of east-west autobahn traffic went into its second day today as West German parliamentary committees began meeting in West Berlin.

West German border officials at Helmstedt, on the Berlin-Hamburg highway, said travelers en route to Berlin were delayed up to 1½ hours at the border crossing, and that vehicles were lined up for more than a mile.

In Bavaria, officials at the Rudolphstein control station said traffic was moving normally but had been slowed considerably during the night.

A total of 10 West German parliamentary committees will convene in West Berlin during the weekend in symbolic assertion of West German's claim on the city.

The East German Foreign Ministry issued a statement protesting the committee meetings and stating that Bonn would be held responsible for any actions resulting from the West German "provocation."

JAKARTA (AP) — About 10,000 angry students surged through Jakarta's streets today protesting government corruption and increased fuel prices. It was the biggest demonstration since the student protests which four years ago played a major part in the overthrow of President Sukarno.

The students marched through the center of the city in a column a mile long, beating on cars, smearing vehicles with anticorruption slogans and plastering stickers on trees and walls.

They defied a military ban on demonstrations. Hastily summoned military police patrolled the march but made no arrests. Students leaders said the demonstrations, which began a week ago, will continue. They described today's march as a "warmup to demonstrate our strength."

BRUSSELS (AP) — Belgium's Roman Catholic primate, Leo Joseph Cardinal Suenens, joined Holland's bishops Wednesday in calling for a churchwide debate on the issue of priestly celibacy.

"The problem is not solved because a local church decided on it, since it is a problem that concerns the Church as a whole," he said. "It is up to the Pope to make the dialogue possible."

Earlier this week, Holland's eight Roman Catholic bishops called for churchwide discussion of celibacy, saying the Dutch church would profit by having married as well as celibate priests.

Altar Boys Pilfer Offertory Baskets

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Six altar boys accused of stealing $1,500 from offering baskets at St. Patrick Roman Catholic Church were being held today.

The boys were charged with juvenile delinquency. Police said they pilfered cash from the baskets from October through December while taking them to the church office.

Bipartisan Spirit Rules Over New Anti-Crime Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The election-year wrangle over responsibility for soaring crime rates gave way to a bipartisan spirit in the opening of Senate debate on an organized crime control bill.

The measure is designed to equip the government with new legal weapons to dry up underworld gambling profits, prevent the corruption of local officials, and root out gangster infiltration of legitimate businesses and labor unions.

The measure, put together by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., represents an amalgam of bills introduced by members of both parties, plus the recommendations of President Nixon and Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell.

McClellan told the Senate as the debate got underway Wednesday that the bill represented "one of the most thoroughly gratifying bipartisan efforts in which I have participated since coming to the Senate."

He expressed hope for unanimous passage, saying such support would tell the underworld the Senate intends to use all its constitutional powers to eradicate organized crime.

Less than half a dozen senators were on hand most of the opening debate even though crime has been tagged a top election issue.

The measure would make large-scale illicit gambling operations a federal crime for the first time—as well as the bribery of local police and other officials by gambling syndicates. McClellan said huge gambling profits finance other illegal activities by the Mafia and other underworld organizations.

"If we can remove the syndicate gambler from circulation," he said, "we will have at the same time largely eliminated the extortioner, the corruptor, the robber and murderer, the gangster himself."

Another major feature of the bill is the use of antitrust law concepts to strike at racketeer infiltration of legitimate business, including court injunctions and decrees for forfeiture, divestment and dissolution.

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP) — Former President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, here for a vacation, plan to spend the next week in a house at nearby Puerto Marques owned by Former President Miguel Aleman of Mexico.

The Johnsons arrived by private plane Wednesday from Austin, Tex. Their stay in Mexico is expected to last several weeks.

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi dedicated a memorial plaza here Wednesday in memory of Indian independence leader Mohandas K. Gandhi and American civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Mrs. Gandhi said that although the two men never met, their mission was the same: To put an end to inequalities and hatreds.

The plaza has four stone pillars each with quotations from King and Gandhi. Mrs. Gandhi said the plaza symbolized joint efforts by India and the United States to eliminate hatred and violence.

Youth of Britain See Freedom an Illusion

(Last of Three Articles.)

By TOM CULLEN
NEA European Correspondent

LONDON — (NEA) — In the first sweeping change of 1970, Britain's 18-year-olds, all three million of them, have come into their own, legally speaking.

Thanks to new legislation lowering the age of legal maturity, 18-year-olds for the first time are eligible to vote in local and national elections. They can now marry without the consent of parents or court. They can also enter legal agreements, borrow money, make a will.

Until Jan. 1, 1970, young people had to be at least 21 years of age before they could do any of these things.

As a fringe benefit, an 18-year-old can now be hypnotized in public for entertainment purposes. He can also receive literature through the mails from his bookmaker. All of these are fruits of the Family Law Reform Act passed by Parliament last year to become effective in 1970.

So far there has been no public rejoicing as youth enters the promised land. For example, there has been no stampede of 18-year-olds to get married without their parents' consent. Nor has there been any teen-age buying spurge such as one might expect with the relaxing of credit facilities for the young. Teen-agers are playing their newly found freedom very cool indeed.

"Much of this freedom is an illusion," a student at the London School of Economics, just turned 18, explained to me. "For example, we can now vote in parliamentary elections, but we are not allowed to become a member of parliament until we are 21."

The lowering of the legal age limit here has created other anomalies. An 18-year-old offender will still get special treatment in British courts and of his parents for income tax purposes.

"The embargo is unpopular here," said Gauchery. "Ninety-five per cent of our people are for Israel. They're a brave people, the Israelis."

Surprisingly, there has been no rush of the young to take advantage of their new political privileges. More than a third of the 18-year-olds eligible to vote did not bother to register in time to be included on the new electoral roll, which comes into force in February.

This means that more than a million young people have lost their right to vote in 1970-71.

In this case, the teen-agers were not entirely to blame, since the registration form was sent to the head of the household, who was supposed to fill in the names of all members who would reach the age of 18 by February 15, 1971, together with the date of their 18th birthday. Many family heads apparently found the instructions too confusing and ignored them.

Nevertheless, the political apathy of the young is confirmed by other sources. Last year the London borough of Bromley, for example, invited 3,600 new young voters to a "welcome to citizenship" party. Only 215 accepted the invitation and, of these, only 118 turned up.

This year Bromley has dropped the idea of trying to interest youth actively in municipal affairs; instead, it will send the 14,000 new young voters in its area a free booklet outlining social services.

For many 18-year-olds the dawn of financial independence has proved to be anything but rosy. The reason for this is that they are finding it hard to establish credit-worthiness at their tender years.

Legally, an 18-year-old may be able to get a mortgage but in practice his income has to be so high as to put the house of his dreams out of reach. "For a salesman on commission, we like to take an average of income over three years," says a spokesman for Abbey National, one of Britain's largest building loan societies. "If he can show a steady income of $6,000 a year over three years, his application will go straight through."

Unfortunately, not many 18-year-old salesmen can show such earnings in Britain.

The same is true of other goodies, such as color TV sets and cars. Three big credit finance houses questioned said they would not approve loans to under-21s except where credit worthiness was fully established.

"It's not that we think that 18-year-olds are irresponsible," a spokesman for Mercantile Credit explained, "but we want to make damn sure of their credit rating."

In practice this means that the 18-year-old, now trying his wings for the first time under Britain's new reform laws, will still need dad's signature if he wants to fly on the "never-never," as credit buying is called here. "A financial guarantor for clients aged 18 will be a normal requirement," firmly announces the man from Mercantile Credit.

French Officials Keep Close Tabs on Mirages

CHATEAUDUN, France (AP) — Georges Provot, the freight agent, came out of the Cafe le Commerce after breakfast to give his horse Button the piece of croissant he hadn't eaten.

Suddenly the sound of jets ripped overhead across the murky sky. The horse shuddered and snorted, his breath unfurling in two smoky ribbons. "There they go—there they go," said Provot with a chuckle. But he was wrong; the planes weren't Mirage fighters on their way to Israel in defiance of the government's ban on arms to the Israelis.

Israel paid for 50 Mirages before the 1967 Middle East war, then was denied them by President Charles de Gaulle's ban on arms to "active belligerents" in the Arab-Israeli conflict. The jets used to be kept at Istres, a base northwest of Marseille near the Mediterranean coast. An edgy French government moved them 375 miles inland to Chateaudun, 85 miles southwest of Paris, after the Israelis slipped five embargoed gunboats out of Cherbourg harbor on Christmas Eve.

The planes are well guarded in an immense hangar near the southeast corner of the air base just outside town. From a plowed cornfield at Boirville you can make out two jeeps, each mounted with a machine gun, patrolling beside the closed hangar.

But you can't see the planes. You have to take the word of the townspeople and Israeli sources in Paris that they're there. The only jets in sight are a couple of trainers practicing landings and takeoffs.

Mayor Paul Gauchery looks like one of the taciturn men you see through the steamy cafe windows playing cards with their caps on. Short and thick, he wears a striped wool tie, a dark plaid flannel shirt and jacket and pants that don't match.

A man who has spent all of his life farming, Gauchery says the government's policy is bad business ("the Israelis paid for the planes") and bad morals ("you don't drop a friend like that").

Israeli mechanics and technicians used to be trained at the air base.

When the townspeople were asked to choose some foreign place to be "twinning" with, as Los Angeles and Paris are "twinning," they chose Upper Galilee. Because of this commitment and their memories of Israel's stationed at the local base earlier, there was special interest in the Cherbourg affair.

"If they can do it in Cherbourg, maybe they can do it here," said a merchant. "We know how to keep our mouths closed."
